PAINÉ FAMILY RECORDS:

A Quarterly Magazine of Genealogical and Biographical Information relating to the American Families of Payne, Paine, Payn, etc.

EDITED BY HENRY D. PAINE, M. D.

The object of the above work—the first volume of which is now completed—is to collect for preservation and future reference the scattered and fading records of the family named in the title. Its range of inquiry includes all American branches of this patronymic, however variously spelled, especially those of Colonial origin, their ante-emigration sources and lineage, and an accurate registration of their successive generations. In particular it seeks to rescue from further destruction, or loss, such authentic relics and memorials of the Fathers and Founders of our race in this country as may yet be recovered.

The rich mine of material available for these objects is indicated by the amount of important and curious information already published. The volume already completed is a treasury of interesting and memorable facts, collected from many sources with much trouble and at no inconsiderable cost, illustrative of the origin, genealogy and traditions of the Paine family, the greater part of which must have been a surprise to the generality of readers. Besides much matter of general interest exemplifying the annals of the family at different times, the RECORDS devotes a large part of every number to the publication of carefully arranged Pedigrees, in which particular lines of descent are traced from their first known progenitor in this country—and in some cases from a much earlier date—through successive generations.

The supply of like valuable contributions to the stock of family lore being still abundant and accumulating, it is proposed, in compliance with many urgent requests, to continue the publication of the Magazine for some time to come, and, if possible, until the most important particulars have been recovered, should the subscriptions afford sufficient encouragement for doing so. Thus far the receipts have not been sufficient to defray the expenses of publication and distribution, and the Editor respectfully appeals to his fellow-members of the family to manifest their approval of the undertaking by giving it the necessary support. Those who are disposed to ensure its permanent success can most effectually do so by ordering a number of copies. Any excess of receipts above the cost of publication will be devoted to the enlargement of the Magazine or to the prosecution of further researches.

The work will be issued, as heretofore, in quarterly numbers of, at least, 24 octavo pages each, without covers, for ONE DOLLAR a year (four numbers), in advance. In future the months of publication will be January, April, July, and October.

The first volume, bound in cloth, with a copious Index, will be sent by mail, post free, for TWO DOLLARS. The same, in numbers, with Title page and Index, unbound, is offered to new subscribers for ONE DOLLAR a set; (eight cents additional, for postage, if to be sent by mail). As the number of complete sets on hand is limited, this offer cannot be held open indefinitely, and only as a premium to new subscribers. Early subscriptions and renewals are again earnestly solicited.

All persons having knowledge of facts relating to any branch of the family, are earnestly requested to send the information to this office, to be used as opportunity or occasion may require.

The experience of the last two years in publishing this magazine has shown how large and rich a field for genealogical research has been developed in the annals of the Payne family, and what unsuspected stores of its personal history and incident are within reach of diligent and discriminating investigation. Much authentic testimony as to the origin and early segregation of the Paynes as a distinct family, or race, has been collected, and many details indicative of the character and acts of its founders and their successors, have been found scattered through numerous early chronicles and gathered up by industrious compilers.

It is especially interesting to the present generation to learn that so many attested facts concerning the first planters of our name in these American colonies have escaped the ravages of time, and that they afford abundant evidence of the sterling character that seems to have distinguished our immigrant forefathers as a class, and of the active and influential share they took in forming and directing the institutions of the country.

The same is happily true also with regard to many of their innumerable descendants. From still existing records it has been possible to follow in their growth and ramifications the families founded by those resolute patriarchs through several successive generations, with tolerable fullness, and in a number of instances, to compile for publication fairly complete pedigrees down to the present time, and to reproduce many characteristic memorials of its individual members.

These results of much labor and research by a number of zealous and intelligent correspondents, have, in part, appeared in the first volume of this serial, and have become permanent portions of the family chronicles. But the supply of similar material is far from being exhausted. There yet remain many valuable and interesting contributions for which it has not been possible to find space within the limits of its pages. It is hoped that most of those that have been long waiting will have better fortune in the following numbers, and room be found also for other important papers that are in course of preparation. Notwithstanding the abundance of the present supply, it is most desirable that the collection of material should still be continued. Though so much has been accomplished, still more remains to be done before our work can be considered complete, which will not be until all available sources of information have yielded up their treasures to the common stock. Contributions of such information as has any relation to the work in hand, will therefore be still thankfully received, and will be used as opportunity offers or occasion requires.

To those esteemed co-laborers and correspondents who have contributed so liberally to the value and interest of the "Records" hitherto, the Editor takes this opportunity to return his thanks, and to express the hope that their interest in the work and its object will continue unabated.

The extraordinary revelations of the historical antiquity of our family in England, contained in the leading article in this number, seem to require its publication at length. The undoubted evidence thus given of the character and possessions of the presumptive founder of our race is most interesting and valuable.

PAYNE OF DOMESDAY,* A. D. 1041-1086.

BY PROF. T. O. PAINE, LL. D.

“DOMESDAY Book, or the Great Survey of England, was made by order of William the Conqueror, A. D. 1086. It is contained in two volumes, the first of which, called Great Domesday Book, is a folio of 760 pages, two columns on a page; the second, called Little Domesday Book, containing the survey of the counties of Norfolk, Suffolk, and Essex, is a large octavo of 900 pages, one column on a page. These volumes contain the Census of the Kingdom, made up from the returns from each county of England, excepting the four northern counties, viz: Northumberland, Cumberland, Westmoreland, and Durham.”—Introduction to Photozincograph.

The date (1086) is found at the end of the work itself, in Little Domesday. The Book does not include a survey of Wales and Scotland. William sent out all over the conquered portion of England and took the names of all the men who owned land; found how much each held; how many serfs, bordercottagers, villani, etc., were on each lot; how much each piece was worth in the time of King Edward, and how much now; how much forest there was, pasture, and meadow; how many hogs, oxen, and sheep could be kept on the ground; and like particulars.

The original copy of Domesday has been preserved through all the centuries, 1086—1880. It has recently been photozincographed: photographed into printer's ink. A copy is owned by the Boston Public Library. It is in thirty-two thin volumes, exactly the size of the originals. They are very beautiful. Every letter and figure is sharp and very black. The language is Latin. The words are mostly shortened—often to a single letter, but the meaning is always certain.

I looked at every line and word of all these volumes (Nov. 6, 1879—Feb. 2, 1880): in some volumes twice and thrice. I have translated, and published in the following pages, for the first time since the days of William the Conqueror, all the passages of Domesday describing the holdings of Payne, and of his son Edmund, and of Edmund's sister.

I have made the great discovery that Payne—first name not given—owned land in fifteen counties; that these counties touched each other; that he did not own in any other counties; that they formed four sides of a square; that every one of the four corners of this square touched an important body of salt water: the English Channel, the Wash, the Irish Sea, and the Bristol Channel.

I have found that not only Payne owned in this way, but that many others owned in a similar manner. Hence I have made it appear that a man could not travel from one county into another unless he owned land in that other county. His passport was his certificate of ownership in the county through or into which he wished to go. The King and Church owned in every county. Of others it is often said: "He (or they) could go whithersoever he (they) would"; they owned in one county after another, in every direction, so that they held passports for every point.

I have proved that Payne owned in England before William conquered it:  "tenuit paganus t. r. e. iiii. car'. traec." Payne used to hold, in the time of King Edward, four ploughlands of land.  See NORFOLK, below. Edward the Confessor reigned, A. D. 1041-1065. William conquered A. D. 1066.

Beginning at the English Channel in Sussex, Payne could drive horse and hound from Sussex (2), through Hampshire (3), Berkshire (2), Oxfordshire (1), Buckinghamshire (8), Hertfordshire (3), Cambridgeshire (6), Norfolk County (1) on the North East, to the Wash in the North Sea. Thence North West, through Cambridgeshire again, Northamptonshire (1), Leicestershire (1), Staffordshire (1), Cheshire (4), to the Irish Sea. Thence South, through Worcestershire (1), Gloucestershire (1), to the head of the Bristol Channel. Thence South East, through Wiltshire (2), Hampshire and Sussex again, home, to the English Channel. He could do business on the ocean at the four points. The figures (2), etc., denote the number of holdings in the shire or county—37 in all. Twenty-six of these lay in the line between the English Channel and the Wash. When he crossed over to the Irish Sea he bought only one holding in each shire—Northampton, Leicester, Stafford. When he reached the Irish Sea he bought four holdings in Cheshire; then one each in Worcester and Gloucester; proving these single holdings to be mere steppingstones across otherwise impassible gulfs. His first holdings thus lay between Sussex and Norfolk.

Other men held similarly, as said. Notice that Payne holds land from William, son of Ansculf, in Buckinghamshire, Staffordshire, and Worcestershire. Of William Pevrel, in Buckinghamshire, Northamptonshire, and Leicestershire. Most of the men in Domesday have no name at all. They are simply called villani, serfs, bordercottagers, radmen, etc. When a man has a name he has only one; as, Payne. A second man of the same name is Edmund, son of Payne; Hugh the Earl, Hugh de Port, Hugh de St. Quintin, etc. The Payne of Domesday is never called anything but Payne. He had no brother, as some translators make him to have, but one son, Edmund, and one daughter, name not given, simply: "Daughter of Payne" (NORFOLK). These three are all the Paynes of Domesday; there is not one other.

Payne's name appears in two forms. His real name is Pagen—so written about half the time. As often, it is Latinized into Paganus. This g was soft, and was afterwards changed into y and i. Compare Old legen (Anglo-Saxon), New lain; paenig, penny; daeg, day; daeglic, daily. This g even disappears in a long a, as, thegen, thāne. Hundreds of examples could be added. He was a Norman.

"Payne holds of the King" in HAMPSHIRE, and "Edmund, son of Payne, holds Bertune of the King" in SOMERSETSHIRE; marks of royal favor. Each shire and county has a head-list of first tenants—King, Church, and High Churchmen, Earls, etc. In Great Domesday Payne's name does not appear in any of these head-lists. But in Little Domesday appears the name of Edmund, son of Payne, in the head-list of Norfolk County.*

When the Conqueror made his New Forest, "Nova Foresta," in Hampshire, he seized all three of Payne's holdings, which lay in the New Forest region. This, and a great many other items of interest, may be picked out of the following full translation.

My brother, Hon. A. W. Paine, has already made use of facts herein stated, for which he was urgent for permission to give credit to me; but I would not consent, because my researches were not completed.* Even now "Edmund, son of Payne," is reported only where this full designation is written out in Domesday. But "Edmund" alone means "Edmund, son of Payne:" but I need to study here yet further.

All the Paines of America and England, for eight hundred years, would most surely be looked upon by Payne of Domesday as his children and relatives, including the founder of the Knights Templar. This article would thus properly head the Records of our vast and ancient family, uniting us in one brotherhood, joining hands across a great ocean and the great centuries.

THOMAS PAINE, FOUNDER OF THE EASTHAM FAMILY, AND HIS POSTERITY.

BY JOSIAH PAINE, OF HARWICH, MASS.

• Of the ancestry of Thomas Paine, of Eastham, founder of that family of Paines which settled on Cape Cod, but very little is certainly known as yet. Credible traditional accounts that came down in several branches of the family, and committed to writing before the commencement of the present century, have it that he came over from England with his father, who bore the same name, when a lad of about ten years of age, having lost the sight of one of his eyes by an arrow, married Mary Snow, and settled in Eastham Mass. As to the date of their arrival, and the name of the place whence they came, traditional accounts differ. The descendents in the line of James, of Barnstable, have it that they came from the "North of England," while those in the line of John, of Eastham, have reported they came from "Kent." In what vessel they found passage, or at what place they landed on the New England coast, no account, oral or written has come to the knowledge of the writer.

• Of what became of the elder Thomas, there is nothing positively known. It is supposed by some he found his way to Yarmouth, and was the Thomas Payne who was the first Deputy from that place to the Old Colony Court at Plymouth, in June, 1639, who took the freeman's oath June 4, that year, who was able to bear arms in 1643, and who was a resident in that town as late as 1650.

THOMAS PAINE, the son, who came over when a lad of about ten years of age, married Mary Snow, and settled in Eastham, as tradition has it, but at what date, cannot be ascertained either from the Colonial or the ancient records of Eastham. He was there, however, in 1653, and was acting in the capacity of a constable. In 1655 he was one of the nineteen mentioned as among the townsmen of Eastham.

He was propounded at the Colony Court, at Plymouth and admitted a freeman June 1, 1658. In 1662, he was appointed, with Nicholas Snow, Jonathan Sparrow, and Giles Hopkins, to view and lay out the meadow between Namskaket and Silver Spring, within the limits of Eastham, to those of the inhabitants entitled to the same; and the same year, with Giles Hopkins, was appointed a surveyor of highways. In 1664, he was appointed one of the Deputies to the Colony Court, and one of the Jury. In 1667, he was, with eleven others, called to investigate the causes that led to the deaths of Robert Chappell, James Nichols, and James Pideil, of Capt. John Allen's company, who were put ashore at Cape Cod. The same year he was allowed by the Colony Court to select a tract of land for his use; and in June, 1669, he was allowed, with Experience Michell, Henry Sampson, and Thomas Little, to purchase land at Namskaket, now Middleboro'. Mass. With these persons, July 20, the same year, he purchased of Tuscaquin, the Black Sachem, and his son, William, for ten pounds sterling, their right to the grant. This land laid adjoining to John Alden's tract at the famous Assowamsett Pond. In 1670, with Jonathan Sparrow, he was appointed an inspector of the Ordinaries in town, and to see that there was no excessive drinking; and the same year, one of the Grand Inquest.

In 1670, he became interested in the purchase of land in what is now Truro, Mass., of the proprietors. His first purchase was of Gov. Thomas Prence, of Plymouth, May 2, 1670, his "half share," lying between "Bound Brook" and "Eastern Harbor" or "Lovell's Creek," for which he paid the sum of twenty pounds, which tract he sold to his son Thomas, March 30, 1690, for the same sum. The first day of June, 1673, he purchased of Jabez Howland, for fifteen pounds, all his right to land purchased and unpurchased in the same vicinity, which he sold March 30, 1690, to his son Thomas, for twenty pounds in silver.

For many years anterior to 1670, the head of the Cape, now Provincetown, had been the resort of fishermen from various parts, and it being within the limits of the Colony of Plymouth, the Court that year, upon complaint being made of careless persons "casting their ballast near the shore," where seines were drawn, and "leaveing the garbidge of ffish or dead ffish to lye there," decreed that for every offense a penalty of forty shillings: also, that whoever, within the limits of the Colony, should "draw mackerall on shore there" should pay six pence per barrel for every barrel taken for the Colony's use; also, that all "fforaigners" should pay for every barrel taken one shilling and six pence, and give "sufficient securitie" unto the bailiff for the fulfilment of every promise made, before "entrance on the voyage," etc., and Thomas Paine, of Eastham, was appointed the "bayley by land and water to demand and receive for the Colonie's use the above mensioned sums," etc., etc., in June, this year. He served the Colony in this office many years, giving entire satisfaction.

The following year, 1671, he represented Eastham at the Colony Court; also a Deputy in 1672, '73, '76, '78, '80, '81, and in 1690. He was a Selectman of Eastham in 1671, and reelected several years after. In 1676 he was one of the committee to collect a debt from Sandwich, and one of the committee chosen to superintend the building of the meeting-house in Eastham. He was the Treasurer of Eastham from 1674 to 1694.

In 1677, with Mr. Huckins, of Barnstable, Mr. Gray, of Plymouth, and Mr. Constant Southworth, the Colonial Treasurer, he hired the fishing privileges and profits at the head of the Cape for a period of seven years, paying yearly the sum of thirty pounds. In 1685, with Rev. Samuel Treat, Capt. Jonathan Sparrow, John Mayo, Sen., and Jabez Snow, he was chosen by the town, with full authority, to hear and "determine the differences between those called Purchasers and the town," respecting land within the limits of Eastham.

Some time previous to 1695 he removed from Eastham to Boston, where, the records say, he purchased of Thomas Stableford, of Philadelphia, March 14, 1694, his homestead, situated at the South End, paying the sum of one hundred and thirty pounds. This estate he conveyed to Eleazer Darby, a mariner, for the same sum, October 13, 1697. This year, June 7, he, then a resident of Boston, sold to Ephriam Little, of Plymouth, his share of land at a place in Bristol County, Mass., called Showamet, it being his thirtieth part of that whole tract of land which Constant Southworth, Esq., the late treasurer of the Colony of New Plymouth, on the twelfth of November, Anno Dom. 1677, by ye order of the General Court . . . did grant, sell and confirm unto sundry persons whose names are particularly expressed," of whom "the said Thomas Paine" was one. How long after this period he resided in Boston does not appear, but evidently not long.

By trade he appears to have been a cooper, yet from what can be learned from records he was skilled in the art of mill building, and was employed in erecting them in various parts of the county. For the great expense he was at "in building two Grist Mills in Eastham for the use of the town" he was allowed, in 1683, a large tract of land on the northerly side of "Kescayogansett Cove," which is now included within the limits of Orleans.

So far as can be ascertained he was a man of more than ordinary education. He was a splendid penman. The writer has a specimen of his penmanship when well advanced in years, with his signature. He wrote his name Tho. Paine.

He died at Eastham, August 16, 1706, but at what age is not known. That he was "aged" is certain. He affirms it in his will, and his son John, also, in his diary, points to the same fact when speaking of the death of his "aged father." As no stone, with inscription, points out the resting place of Thomas Paine, it is unknown where he was buried: but the supposition is his ashes lie in the old burying ground west of Town Cove, in Eastham, Mass., where lie the early settlers of that town.

Mary Snow, the wife of Thomas Paine, was a daughter of Nicholas and Constance Snow. Nicholas came over in the Ann, in 1623, and married Constance, daughter of Stephen Hopkins, of the Mayflower band of Pilgrims. Nicholas Snow was a prominent man in the Colony. With six others, it appears, he began the settlement of Eastham in 1645. His death occurred in 1676. Mary Paine was a woman of whom much has been said in her praise. She was a "faithful wife," "a careful mother," a good and "quiet neighbor," a "diligent reader of God's Holy Word," and a lover of and an attendant at "God's house of worship." Dea. John Paine, her son, thus speaks of her last hours and death in his diary: "On the 28th day of April, 1704, my honored mother, Mary Paine, departed this life, being suddenly taken and struck with death, she having been in reasonable health all day, was taken ill about sunset so she never after spoke reasonable; but decaying gradually gave up the Ghost about the dawning of the day." Neither the date of her birth or marriage appears. No stone, with inscription, marks her resting place.

The will of Thomas Paine is on record at Barnstable. The following is a copy, verbatim:—

In the name of God. Amen. The twelfth day of May, 1703, I, Thomas Paine of Eastham, in ye County of Barnstable, in ye Province of Massachusetts Bay; being aged and weak in body, but of sufficient mind and memory—thanks be given to God—therefore calling to mind the mortality of my body, and knowing that it is appointed for all men once to die, do make and ordain this my last Will and Testament; that is to say, principally and first of all, I give and recommend my soul into ye hands of God that gave it, and my body I reconmend to the earth to be buried in decent Christian burial at ye disposition of my Executors, nothing doubting but at ye general resurrection I shall receive ye same again by the mighty power of God. FROM various circumstances the appearance of this number has been unavoidably delayed. Pains will be taken to prevent a similar failure in future. The April number is already well under way, and will undoubtedly be issued punctually.

It is a matter of regret to the Editor that some papers prepared for this issue have been necessarily deferred. Among them are the continuation of the "Southold" branch, and an extended and interesting account of the founder of the "Ipswich" family, and the numerous important public works begun and promoted by him. Both these articles will be given in the next number.

Other papers of value are marked for insertion, and will appear as early as possible. On account of the moderate limits of the magazine, and out of consideration for other contributors, correspondents are requested to study conciseness in their communications intended for publication.

IN MEMORIAM.

REV. JOTHAM MELZAR PAINE, of Hallowell, Maine, died at that place, on Sunday, the 19th September, at the age of thirty-eight years. He was the son of Jotham L. Paine, of Westmoreland, N. H., and there born October 25th, 1842, being of the lineage of William Paine of Ipswich.

After a short course of study at Tufts College, he went to St. Lawrence University of Canton, N. Y., where he graduated in 1869. He prepared himself for the ministry of the Universalist persuasion and was ordained soon after as pastor of the church at Gardiner and Hallowell, Maine, where he remained three years. In 1872 he was installed pastor of the church of Norwich, Conn., but owing to a severe accident which befel him there, he soon left the place as also the ministry, and entered upon a new course of life.

In 1871 he married Miss Persis M. Bodwell, the daughter of J. R. Bodwell, of Hallowell, and after the accident referred to, he entered into the employ of the Bodwell, or Hallowell Granite Company as Cashier and Director, retaining that position so long as his failing health admitted. From the effects of his accident he never recovered and an early death was the result. He was a great sufferer for many months, but bore his pains with great fortitude and resignation.

He was a person of scholarly attainments, of taste and culture, a kind husband and father, an accommodating neighbor and an honest man; highly respected and beloved as a useful member of society and a devoted and successful pastor. His loss will be irreparable to his family and associates and deeply felt by the community in which he lived. He leaves his wife a widow, with a young son, to mourn his loss.

The several newspapers of his neighborhood and county joined in eulogistic notices of his death and character, expressive of the public sentiment entertained respecting him.

WOODSTOCK BRANCH.

BY ROYAL PAINE, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

140. Children of Walter (VI.), and his first wife, Lydia Snow, all born in Providence.

Erratum.—On page 160, Vol. 1, WALTER (VI.) is erroneously numbered 148.

169. WALTER (VII.), born September 14, 1801; married Sept. 23, 1823, Sophia Field Taylor, who was born January 14, 1805, daughter of Andrew W. Taylor, and his wife, Elizabeth Field, of Providence, who was the daughter of John, who was the son of John, who was the son of Zachary, the son of John Field, the first, of Providence. Andrew W. Taylor was the son of Gideon, of Little Compton, who was the son of Robert, the son of John, and, I think, the son of Robert Taylor, of Newport, R. I.

Mr. Paine received as good an education as the best schools in Providence could give, in days when it was not deemed necessary to pursue any scientific branch of study by going through a regular collegiate course. He was by nature a close and practical observer, with a very retentive memory, and having a taste for reading, he acquired information rapidly on any subject to which his attention was directed, and thus he had a good general acquaintance, during his life-long study, with many things that are seldom sought or acquired by business men. Upon leaving school, he passed one or two winters as a clerk in Savannah, Ga., and then went into the counting-room of his father, who was a cotton manufacturer, and whose sign for about thirty years indicated his office and storehouse on the south side of Market Square, near the east end of the bridge.

He afterwards engaged in the wholesale grocery business with Chester Pratt, then with the late Asa Pierce, which business yielded him a reasonable profit; but the depression of the manufacturing business in 1835, 1836, and 1837, reduced his father to bankruptcy, whose paper was liberally endorsed by his son, obliging him, in order to sustain himself, to take the manufacturing business into his own hands, which caused him also to succumb, with many others, in 1837.

In 1838 Mr. Paine was elected Clerk of the Supreme Court for the County of Providence, which position he held about thirteen years, he being the only person who was not bred a lawyer, that has ever occupied that position—and a book of legal forms compiled and arranged by him is yet the recognized standard of the Court.

In 1851, in conjunction with Capt. William Comstock, he organized the Merchants Insurance Company, of Providence, becoming its first Secretary, and subsequently its President, which office he held until his sudden death, which occurred May 14, 1879, in his 78th year. Mrs. Paine is living—January, 1881.

Mr. Paine held many political offices: was a member of the Common Council of Providence, was an Alderman from the Fourth Ward, and was several times solicited to allow his name to be used as a candidate for Mayor, which honor he did not covet. He identified himself with the anti-Masonic party, was a delegate to their conventions, and when that party was at the zenith of its power, he was offered the nomination as Governor of the State, which he declined. In his habits Mr. Paine was methodical and persistent; in fact, so regular that his acquaintances could safely set their time-pieces when he passed a certain corner on his way to dinner. He was a tenant of Market Square for nearly sixty years, and a customer of one boot-maker for more than half a century. His judgment was so correct in making investments that they were rarely changed, except by additions to them. He was positive, yet yielding to convictions, clear-headed and upright, faithful to all duties put upon him or assumed by him, and never found wanting when called upon to render an account of his work. In his family he was very kind; an affectionate husband and father; willing to allow his children any reasonable indulgence that would promote their happiness, but requiring a positive compliance with all commands that he believed would be for their welfare.

The children of Walter and Sophia were:

Mr. Paine has passed the greater part of his life in Providence, having there a very extensive acquaintance and hosts of friends, made and retained by his kind and generous disposition and friendly manners, and his readiness always to sacrifice his own convenience and interests to the comfort of others. His wife and himself were members of the Baptist Church. Their children were:

the year 1720, and settled in Hartford, where he married, first, Mrs. Hannah Caldwell; she died in 1755; and he married, second, Mrs. Hannah Knowles, who died in 1766. Dr. Neil died January 17, 1784, aged 82 years. Sally Wadsworth was the daughter of Henry Wadsworth and Elizabeth Bidwell, and the great-great-grand-daughter of the renowned Capt. Joseph Wadsworth, who, in 1687, secreted the Charter of Connecticut in the celebrated oak in Hartford, to prevent its being taken by Sir Edmund Andros, who, with his body-guard of sixty soldiers, stood ready to seize and carry it to King James the Second, in England.

Mr. Paine's father's father was a twin, and his mother's mother was a twin. His father and mother were married July 2d, he was born July 2d, and his father died July 2d. He graduated from Brown University in 1827, in the first class under the presidency of Dr. Francis Wayland, and after a clerkship of two years in New York, he visited the State of Colombia in South America, where he traveled several months among the Andes, on the Magdalena river, and suffered much from the malarial fevers of that inhospitable climate. After his return he was engaged in the survey and construction of the Western Rail Road of Massachusetts from Boston to Albany, and the Michigan Southern Rail Road, and on the construction of the New York and Erie Railway. He was subsequently a deputy collector of Internal Revenue in Brooklyn, N. Y., where he now resides. His wife and himself are members of Lafayette Avenue Presbyterian Church, and have no children.

Tabor, was a volunteer during the late war, and wounded at the battle of Winchester, Va. They have no children. James is a farmer and his wife and himself are members of the Congregational Church.

IPSWICH BRANCH.

BY ALBERT W. PAINE, ESQ., of Bangor, Me.

Having in the previous numbers of the "Records" given a general history of the family from the earliest period to the present time, it is now proposed to give a more minute and fuller account of different members of the line, and more especially of the American immigrants. In doing this it will naturally require a repetition of some facts already stated, but this will, we trust, be excused, as it is especially desirable to have the account now given a continuous one and uninterrupted. We begin with the history of him whom we may call the American father of the line now traced, a general but brief account of whom has been given in Nos. 1 and 4 of the Records.

WILLIAM PAINE.

William Paine, the original American ancestor of the Ipswich Branch of the great Paine family, it would seem was a man of very much importance in his day, and regarded as among the most active, useful and enterprising citizens of the new country. Inheriting the blood and character of a true Norman ancestry, with that spirit of energy, adventure and public zeal which has so universally characterized that race, through its whole history, he began very soon after his settlement here to exhibit those traits in his business life, and to be recognized accordingly as a citizen of value and importance. He was a man, it would seem, of sterling integrity and of rare business qualification, and came soon to be looked upon as one fitted for public employments and ready to do what he could for the public good. Few men of his day had more to do in establishing systems of public improvement and matters of the public weal than he. Having the prestige not only of good birth, but an inherited fortune, as well as a strong and enterprising mind, he, from the first, showed a readiness to devote himself to the good of his new country in the many ways which its wants made manifest or which were presented to him in the course of his life. His ancestors in the old country had been men of importance in their day, known as men of rank and station, occupying positions of trust and honor as well as of wealth, and he seemed to inherit all these qualities and brought them hither to exercise in his new home in New England.

He was born in Suffolk County, England, probably at Nowton, in 1598-9, and at the age of 36 years came to America, in the year 1635, in the ship Increase, with his wife and five children. He landed at Boston, whence he proceeded at once to Watertown, and formed one of the "Earliest list of the Inhabitants," to whom on July 25, 1636, was "allotted a grant of the Great Dividends to the freeman and all the townsmen there inhabiting, being 120 in number." To each was thus granted 70 acres, Mr. Paine being one of the grantees. The public records show him to have become quite an extensive owner of lands in that town, in the immediate neighborhood of the present grounds of Mt. Auburn, his homestead being located on "the Road to the Pond," the present Washington street, about a half mile west of Fresh Pond. Although he soon after removed to another place, yet his interest in this town seems never to have ceased, as we shall have occasion to notice further on.

Watertown having soon after become surcharged with inhabitants, removals were found necessary, and among those who sought new homes elsewhere was Mr. Paine. On July 4, 1639, he, with his brother Robert and a few others, procured a grant, from the Legislature, of land at Ipswich, "with leave to settle a village there," and thereupon at once removed thither, where he continued to reside for about sixteen years, aiding largely in building up the village ever since known by that name. In the meantime, on May 13, 1640, he was admitted freeman, and hence endowed with all the privileges of citizenship. His sterling integrity and good judgment soon became publicly known, as is evidenced by his frequent Legislative appointment on committees and for the performance of duties requiring the exercise of those qualities. His name is to be found all through the Legislative records ever after, during his life. As early as 1640 he was appointed by the Legislature as appraiser of property at Ipswich. In 1642 he was appointed to establish the limits of Northam (Dover), and about the same time to settle the bounds of Hampton and Colchester; in 1643 to determine the bounds of "Excetter and Hampton"; in 1646 to settle difficulties at Hampton; in 1651 to settle the Hampton line; 1652 to settle the line of Dover and Exeter, and in 1655 to settle the line of Hampton and Colchester.

"Free Adventurers" Enterprise.

Soon after his removal to Ipswich and the settlement of that town, in 1645, the Legislature incorporated him and others into a company known as the "Free Adventurers," for the purpose of advancing the settlement of Western Massachusetts. This enterprise was sustained and prosecuted through a long course of years, and, indeed, during the remainder of his life, both on his part and by the State, and after his death was still further prosecuted by his son John. The frequent mention made of this adventure, by Legislative acts and otherwise, shows the great importance of the work, and the care with which it was nurtured. At its beginning a grant of a township of land was made to the Company "about 50 miles west of Springfield," near Fort Aurania, on the Hudson. The Dutch then held possession of the River and Fort, and one of the last acts of Paine's life was to petition the Legislature to open negotiations with the Dutch Government with a view to secure the free navigation of the river to New York. The petition was effectual, but death prevented the father from carrying out the scheme, and his son John was afterwards found at New York to accomplish the object. The success which attended the arms of Great Britain at home, just at that time, over the Dutch Government, also gave the former possession of New York, and consequently of the river, and made unnecessary all further proceedings in that direction.

Other Characteristics.

A further evidence of the importance with which our ancestor was held as one of the early inhabitants of the colony, consists in the frequent employment of his skill and services in matters of public concern by the Governors of the different States of Massachusetts and Connecticut. This was especially true of Gov. Dudley and Governors Winthrop, father and son, of the two States.

The intimacy between Paine and the Winthrops in particular is evidenced in different ways, but more especially by their correspondence which has been preserved and recently published by the Mass. His. Soc. Among the letters are found some nine in number from Mr. Paine between 1640 and 1659 on various subjects of a public and private nature. [Vol. VII. Series 4.] The quaintness of their contents as well as their comprehensive character as bearing upon the facts of contemporaneous history, otherwise developed, make these letters valuable as well as interesting to all who take an interest in his life and character. They would seem to indicate that he was not what we may call an educated man, but one possessed of a sound mind, good judgment, enterprise, integrity, and public zeal. The first letter to Gov. Winthrop, Sen., is on a matter of private or family concern, as connected with the contemplated marriage of his niece—daughter of his sister Hammond. The exact nature of the point at issue does not appear, but the whole was referred to the Governor as arbiter, and this letter is addressed to him on the subject.

Rev. John Davenport, one of the "four famous Johns" commemorated by Mather, was also one of Mr. Paine's intimate associates, whom it would seem he greatly esteemed. His letters also speak of Mr. Paine, and in one of them, written the week after Mr. Paine's death, the parson announces this event to the Governor.

The intimacy of Mr. Paine with the Governors in question, and more especially with the younger Winthrop, of Connecticut, is exhibited in his almost constant connection with him in his various works of public improvement and enterprise, of which we are about to speak. When a "job" of importance was to be done Mr. Paine seemed to be his main support and help in doing it.

The most striking characteristic of Mr. Paine was the numerous works of a public character which he either originated or engaged in during almost the entire period of his American life. These were many and varied, a more minute account of which follows.

Watertown Mills.

About the time of his first settling in Watertown, as has been already related, or a little before, the first milling enterprise in New England was started in that town by the erection of mills at the head of the tide on Charles River. A stone dam was constructed and mills built by Edward How and Mathew Cradock. It soon came into the ownership of Gov. Dudley, and at his death it was purchased principally by Mr. Paine, who continued to carry it on during the remainder of his life, and thus became one of the first manufacturers in the whole country. His portion, as nearly as can be ascertained, was five-sixths of the whole title. The mill was at first a "corn mill" only, but was afterwards enlarged so as to embrace a "fulling mill" as well. Upon Paine's death the title passed to his son John, who conveyed it in mortgage to Samuel Appleton, his brother-in-law, which mortgage subsequently passed into an absolute title by foreclosure.

Lynn Iron Works.

Very early also in the history of the colony iron ore was found in Lynn, on the Saugus River, and the great want then felt by the inhabitants for various kinds of iron-ware induced some of the leading members to undertake the enterprise of erecting iron works there. Thos. Dexter and Robert Bridges especially took charge of the business at the beginning, the latter carrying specimens of the ore to England to induce the coöperation of men of capital there. The effort was successful, and a company was formed which advanced £1,000 for the purpose, and thus set the enterprise on foot. Gov. Winthrop, the younger, early became interested in it, and in connection with or through him three-fourths of the whole establishment came into the hands of Mr. Paine. The Legislature recognized the importance of the undertaking and gave it their approval and encouragement by appropriate legislation, exempting the property from taxation, giving it especial privileges for the prosecution of the business, with leave to export its manufactured products by carrying them abroad for sale, "provided they shall not sell to any person in actual hostility to us." "But they must in all places provide some good means whereby the families may be instructed in the knowledge of God." They then voted that "all persons might come in and take stock in the enterprise." These iron works were the first ever constructed in America. They were called and known as the "Hammersmith," from the name of the town in England whence many of the workmen came. At first about seven tons per week of iron were worked out, and afterwards eight, and the works continued to be carried on for a long time. The evidence of their existence remains to this day in the presence of vast heaps of scoria still existing along the Saugus River, a recent letter-writer remarking as a curious fact that, in a neighborhood so well populated for generations, so many tons of these relics should remain heaped up just as the sooty workmen left them 200 years ago. These are known as "Scoria, or Cinder Banks."

At the time of Paine's death he was owner of three-fourths of the title in common with others, the whole being under the supervision of Oliver Purchess. By his will he gave this interest to his son John, adding the following clause; "And I do hereby earnestly request Mr. Oliver Purchess to be helpful to my son John concerning the iron works and the accounts thereof, whose abilities and faithfulness I have had experience of, into whose care I do commit the said accounts." The title subsequently passed from John to Mr. Appleton, though not until after a long lawsuit.

Braintree Iron Works.

Shortly after the iron mine works were established at Lynn, the success which attended them stimulated other places to seek out similar objects of improvement. Among these the first was the town of Braintree, where iron ore was discovered to exist. In this, as at Lynn, Gov. Winthrop took a deep interest, and favored its development. In one of the letters already spoken of as published by the Mass. His. Society, Mr. Paine speaks of his and Mr. Webb's participation in it, and allusion is made to the fact of his purchasing Mr. Webb's interest, and that "he was like to have one-half of the whole works at Lynn and Braintree." By the inventory of his estate it seems he died possessed of three-fourths of the title of both. In his "History of New England," Gov. Winthrop gives a pleasant account of the origin and growth of the works and the means by which the enterprise was accomplished by Legislative aid and by assistance from England. "The business," says he, "was well approved by the Court as a thing much conducing to the good of the country, but we had not stock in the treasury to give furtherance to it. Only some two or three private persons joined in it, and the Court granted the adventurers nearly all their demands, as, a monopoly of it for twenty-one years, freedom from public charges, trainings," etc. A grant of three miles square of land was also made to help on the enterprise to John Winthrop, Jr., and his partners, forever, on the Monotocot River.

New Haven Iron Works.

John Winthrop, Jr., was subsequently made Governor of Connecticut, and took up his residence at New Haven. About that time iron ore had also been discovered there, when he zealously entered into the plan of developing the mine, as had already been done at Lynn and Braintree. The locality of the mine was in what is now known as East New Haven, on the Lake Stream. From the records of the General Court in 1655, we find that the "Iron Worke being considered for the publique good, and Mr. Goodyear declared that he and Mr. Winston did intend to carry it on," and "divers spoke that they would give some work toward making the dam," and accordingly about 140 days work was subscribed. Shortly after the Governor called a meeting, when it was found that some had and some had not performed their subscription, but after consultation it was voted by the town for the works to go on, and proper arrangements were made to carry out the enterprise, including the supply of charcoal necessary for the purpose. On the 14th of September, 1657, the Governor reported that "Mr. Winthrop had let out his part of the iron works to two men in Boston, Capt. Clark and Mr. Paine, as they have agreed." The enterprise having been patronized as a matter of local interest to give employment to their own citizens, this action of the Governor met with very general disapprobation as averse to that end, and also for the reason that it would introduce "a collection of disorderly persons, which would corrupt the morals of the neighborhood and cause great trouble in the town." The matter was finally "referred to the Court and John Cooper to consider of it, who made their report." The business, however, did not change, and Mr. Paine and Mr. Webb continued to carry on the works until the former's death, but no interest in the title was ever obtained by him. In the published letters already referred to, frequent allusion is made to this business, showing Mr. Paine's interest in the work and its progress, as well as Gov. Winthrop's fellowship.

Bradford, in his "History of Massachusetts," bears testimony to the usefulness of these various works in the following manner: "The advancing prosperity of the Colony and the enterprising spirit of the people were witnessed, as by many other improvements, particularly by the introduction of iron works, which were established at Lynn and Braintree, and by ship building, which had much increased. A ship of 400 tons was built in Boston in 1645."

Whether this ship was built by Mr. Paine cannot now be known, but it is an interesting fact as connected with this branch of our subject, that it appears by the inventory of his estate in Probate, that he was part owner of five vessels at the time of his death, and had investments at that time in adventures both to England and Jamaica.

Sturbridge Black Lead Mines.

Another important enterprise in which Mr. Paine was engaged and took a deep interest, was that of working the lead mines at Sturbridge, in company with Thomas Clark. This work was connected with, or, rather, grew out of the "Free Adventurers'" work in the settlement of Western Massachusetts. From what we can glean of its history, he gave to this his very particular attention. He frequently alludes to it in his correspondence with Gov. Winthrop, and reports progress in it. The mines, it would seem, were originally discovered by the Indians, who used the products to paint their faces. Gov. Winthrop's attention being called to the matter, he enlisted Mr. Clark's and Mr. Paine's aid in developing the work. They carried it on for several years, and, at times, with much success. Quantities of the ore were transported to England and there worked up. The Legislature made a grant of the land to Gov. Winthrop where the mines were located, and gave him liberty to purchase other lands of the Indians, being "the hill at Tantousque." The grant was subsequently extended to embrace four miles square. Though very many men were engaged in the work of conducting the mine, yet Paine and Clark, it would seem, paid all the bills and were substantially the only owners or operators of it.

Other Property and Business.

The extensive ownership of lands in various other parts of the country was another marked feature of Mr. Paine's character, as indicating his business habits and enterprising spirit. Among them an interesting instance exists in connection with the island known as THOMPSON'S ISLAND, in Boston harbor, the present location of the Farm School, and always a favorite resort of pleasure seekers in boating excursions. The island was originally taken up and occupied in 1623 by Geo. Thompson, a Scotch immigrant, who first settled in Piscataqua and then removed to the island in question. After his death the Legislature granted it to the town of Dorchester, but after his son came of age they rescinded the "unjust act" and gave it to him, giving the town a right to select some other land in its stead. From young Thompson the title came to Nicholas Davison and Capt. Francis Norton, by whom it was afterwards sold and conveyed to Paine. Subsequently Paine conveyed it to his son John in consideration of his anticipated marriage with Sarah Parker. The deed is on record in Suffolk Registry.

The deed last spoken of also contains an assignment of £1,500 stock in the hands of Brient Pendleton, of Piscataqua (Portsmouth), and also "all the produce and products of said stock, with full right and interest which was in way of co-partnership between him, said Pendleton, and me, the said Wm. Paine." On November 14, 1661, Pendleton and John dissolved co-partnership, and recorded their dissolution as already stated.

As a further marriage gift he gave his son large tracts of land at Ipswich, which he then also owned.

The records also show him the owner of many other farms and lots of land in the neighboring towns of Topsfield, Rowley, and Salem, a mill privilege in Exeter, and other lands in Boston. This latter, probably his home-stead, was bounded by the sea, and included orchards and other improvements. The lands in the other towns seem to be places of residence, as in almost every case mention is made of "the houses thereon," and the large consideration expresses the same idea of valuable improvements.

| 3. ELIOT EDWARD. | 4. MELISSA.       |

Daniel married second, February 25, 1835, Harriet Abbey of Belchertown, Mass., who was born March 13, 1809, in Amherst, Mass., and died January 15, 1836, leaving one child, HARRIET ABBEY, born in South Hadley.

Daniel married third, May 5, 1836, Sophronia Warner, who was born Dec. 4, 1810, at Amherst, and had six children, viz.: DANIEL ELLIOT, EDWARD WARNER, ANSON, ELIJAH CHANDLER, CORNELIUS DICKINSON, born in South Hadley, and DANIEL, JR., born in Amherst. Sophronia (Warner) Paine died Jan. 2, 1870, at Rosemond, Christian Co., Ill.

Daniel married fourth, Dec. 10, 1872, Mrs. Betsey Heywood (Richardson) Smith, who was born April 24, 1814, in Sterling, Mass., and was a daughter of Gardner Richardson and Betsey Heywood, of Templeton, Mass., and was grand-daughter of Col. Benjamin Richardson of Sterling, and also of Daniel Heywood of Winchendon, Massachusetts. She married first, George Smith, and lived with him in Athol twenty-seven years, where he died.

Mr. Paine started out alone from the homestead when he was 21 years old, with only his clothes and a few shillings, with a determination to procure and then to impart what knowledge he could obtain. He early entered upon the life of a teacher, and followed that employment for twenty, or more, years, and was remarkably successful. While yet a young man he assisted in preparing the foundation for the Amherst College building, in Massachusetts, himself taking the first shovelfull of earth from the spot where it stands. He was at that time teaching in the Amherst Academy. The early part of his married life was passed in South Hadley, where, at different times, almost every office of public trust was bestowed upon him. He acted for many years as a Justice of the Peace, Assessor, land surveyor, on the Board of Selectmen, was a School Examiner, Superintendent of Sabbath School, was twice a Representative to the State Legislature of Massachusetts, was Post-master, and Captain of a company of State militia. In the war of 1812 and 1814 he served at one time as a substitute for his uncle, Theophilus Bradbury Chandler, in the Eleventh Connecticut Regiment, and was at the Sunday scare at New London, for which service he has never received a pension. His mathematical abilities were preëminent, and yet he was a self-made scholar. Always faithful to his trust, he gained the respect and love of all who knew him, and his genial, hopeful, good nature has made him through all his long and useful life, the sunshine and joy of every circle, old and young, in which he has moved. Mr. Paine removed from South Hadley to Amherst, where he resided ten years, since which time he has lived in Rosemond, Christian County, Illinois, and now, at the age of 83 years, lives on his farm, with a firm reliance on his Saviour, to whose service he consecrated his life many years since, and is calmly waiting the "call up higher."

EASTHAM FAMILY.

BY JOSIAH PAINE, OF HARWICH, MASS.

It is supposed that Thomas Paine conveyed much of his real estate by deeds to his sons before he made his last will; but it is now impossible to tell to what extent his gifts were, as all the books of records of deeds of Barnstable County were destroyed by fire in 1827. A deed of gift of meadow from him in his own handwriting, to his son, Thomas, in 1684, witnessed by his sons, James and Nicholas, is yet extant.

There is no list of the children of Thomas and Mary Paine in the Eastham books of records. The Plymouth Colony Records give them one child—ELIEZAR—born March 10, 1658; and as nothing farther appears of Eliezar, either upon the records of Eastham or Plymouth Colony, it has led some to believe that Elisha was the one intended, and that either the Colonial Secretary made the mistake in copying or the Clerk of Eastham in making up the returns, and Eliezar was substituted for Elisha. The will, it will be seen, mentions no Eliezar, and if one of that name was born, it seems certain he did not survive long.

Children of THOMAS and MARY PAINE, of Eastham.

3. I. MARY married for first husband, James Rogers, Jan. 11, 1670; for second husband married Israel Cole of Eastham, April 24, 1679.
4. II. SAMUEL.
5. III. THOMAS born in 1656, or 1657.
6. IV. ELIEZAR born March 10, 1658.
7. V. ELISHA.
8. VI. JOHN born March 14, 1660-1.
9. VII. NICHOLAS.
10. VIII. JAMES born July 6, 1665.
11. IX. JOSEPH.
12. X. DORCAS who married Benjamin Vickerie, of Hull about 1690, and died at that place Oct. 30, 1707.

Of the above sons, seven married and were highly respected citizens of the towns in which they respectively settled.

Third Generation.

MARY PAINE, daughter of Thomas and Mary Paine, and probably the eldest child, married James, son of Lieut. Joseph Rogers who came in the Mayflower in 1620, January 11, 1670. He died April 13, 1678. She again married Israel Cole, son of Daniel of Eastham, April 24, 1679.

Her children by James Rogers were :

13. I. JAMES born Oct. 30, 1673, who married Susanah Treasy, Feb. 17, 1697-8.
14. II. MARY born Nov. 9, 1675, who married --- Cole.
15. III. ABIGAIL born March 2, 1677-8, married John Yates in 1698.

By Israel Cole her children were :

16. IV. Hannah born June 28, 1681, who married ~~Cole~~<sup>Higgins</sup> Higgins. See list in June 1681.
17. V. ISRAEL born June 28, 1685.

SAMUEL PAINE, eldest son of Thomas and Mary Paine, married Patience Freeman of Eastham, January 31, 1682, and settled in Eastham where he was a prominent man. He took the freeman's oath, June 6, 1684. He was a selectman of Eastham in 1697, 1700, 1701, 1702 and 1705. He was a Lieutenant of the military company, and held other positions. He was of a religious turn of mind, and his brother John says he "departed and fell asleep * * leaving comfortable hopes that" he "slept in Christ," October 13, 1712, surviving his brother Joseph twelve days. His widow, Patience, took out letters of administration Jan. 27, 1712-13. His estate was valued at £127, 03, 0. His guns, swords and amunition were valued at three pounds. No division was made of the estate, as the following extract from the Probate Records will show, until Jan. 29, 1717 :

"Set out unto sd Patience Paine, the widow, for her dower, the one third of all the real estate of the deceased during her life; then there remains to Eben Paine, the eldest son of the deceased, ninety-three pound and five shillings, and to each of the other children of sd deceased, viz: Joshua Paine, Isaac Paine, Seth Paine, Mercy Paine and Mary Paine forty-sixth pound twelve shillings and six pence a piece which to be paid as followeth, viz: thirty-three pounds five shillings and nine pence a piece to be paid by the administratrix to the five younger children out of the personal estate. and out of that part which Eben

Paine, ye eldest son, is to pay before his mother's decease, and the remainder to be paid out of that part of the money that sd Ebenezar Paine is to pay after ye decease of ye said Patience Paine his mother. And for as much as it is represented to me that the dividing of the real estate of ye deceased will tend to the prejudice or spoiling the whole, and he, the sd. Ebenezar Paine, the eldest son, disposing to have the same settled upon him as the law directs, I do, therefore, hereby order and settle all the housing, lands, and other the real estate of sd deceased lying within the town of Eastham aforesaid, upon and him the said Ebenezar Paine, his heirs and assigns forever, he having given bonds for payment of ye remaining part of the value of said lands, as they were appraised upon oath more than his own double portion of the whole estate; part to be paid before and the remainder after the decease of his said mother, she only enjoying her third thereof during life as aforesaid. In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and the seal of the Court of Probate aforesaid, this 29th day of January, in the fourth year of his Majesty's reign, Annoque. Domini 1717.

JOHN OTIS."

The precise spot where Samuel Paine located in Eastham is not positively known. A descendent in the line of Joshua, the next eldest son, informed the writer some years since, that he had understood the place to be near where Dea. Eben. Paine resided, in the present town of Eastham, then in possession of Joshua Paine; but could afford no documentary or strong traditional proof of the fact. It is quite certain that Joshua Paine, the second son, settled near the place pointed out.

PATIENCE PAINE, the wife of Samuel, was a daughter of Major John Freeman by his wife, Mercy, who was daughter of Gov. Thomas Prence, and granddaughter of Elder William Brewster of the famous band of Pilgrims who came in the Mayflower in 1620, and was named for her grandmother Patience (Brewster) Prence. Major John Freeman was a very prominent man in the Colony of Plymouth; was for many years an assistant to the Governor, and very justly regarded as "one of the fathers of Eastham." The date of her death does not appear.

The children of SAMUEL and PATIENCE PAINE according to the records of Eastham:

18. I. SAMUEL born October 30, 1683, died Oct 5, 1706 aged 23 years.
19. II. MERCY born Aug. 5, 1686, m. Benjamin Cook Nov. 30, 1710.

5.

+ THOMAS PAINE, the second son of Thomas and Mary Paine, was born in the year 1656 or 57. He was twice married. He married first, Hannah, dau. of Jonathan Shaw, August 5, 1678. She died in Truro, July 24, 1713, in her 52d year. For his second wife, he married Mrs. Elizabeth Eairs of Boston, March 8, 1714-15. He was admitted a freeman June 6, 1684. Having purchased of his father the several tracts of land at Pamet, now Truro, in 1690, which his father had bought of Gov. Prence and Jabez Howland, he became a Proprietor, and was interested in the settlement of the place, and removed thither some time after this period, and located on the north side of Little Pamet River, where his house spot is yet to be seen. He was an influential and highly respected citizen. He was clerk of the proprietors and of the town many years. He was selectman of Truro six years, and a Representative five years to the Provincial Legislature at Boston. He was Clerk, Selectman and Representative of Eastham before the incorporation of Truro. Besides being a captain of the Military Company and a Justice of the Peace, he was a special Justice of the Court of Common Pleas for Barnstable County, having been appointed July 5, 1713, and was holding the office at time of his death, which took place at Truro, June 23, 1721, in the 65th year of his age. He lies interred in the old churchyard at that place where a slate stone marks the place with this inscription :

HERE LYES YE BODY OF THOMAS PAINE, ESQ. OF TRURO, DIED JUNE 23, 1721, IN YE 65 YEAR OF HIS AGE.

A cane of his was in existence in Truro a few years ago, and tradition has it that it was brought from England.

His second wife, Elizabeth, survived him, and it is said, was living in Bellingham very aged in 1754. His first wife, Hannah, was buried in Truro. The following is the inscription upon her gravestone :

HERE LYES YE BODY OF MRS. HANNAH, WIFE TO CAPT'N
 THOMAS PAINE. DIED JULY 24th, 1713. IN
 YE 52 YEAR OF HER AGE.

The will of Thomas Paine bears date April 6, 1720. It was presented for approval July 4, 1721, and is upon record at Barnstable. It is a lengthy document. The following is the list of his children as found upon record.

7.

ELISHA PAINE, son of Thomas and Mary Paine of Eastham, married Rebecca Doane of Eastham, January 5, 1685. In 1689 he was a resident of Barnstable, and with ten citizens of that town, had a grant of a number of acres of land at Goodspeed's River, and the benefit of the stream forever, on condition of setting "up a fulling mill on that river," and maintaining "the same twenty years, and full and dress the town's cloth on reasonable terms." His residence here, it seems, was not long; removing back to Eastham, he, about 1700, removed to Connecticut, and located upon the large tract which he had purchased on the west side of Quinebang River in what is now the township of Canterbury. He took an active part in the organization of the town, was one of the eight who formed the first church there, June 11, 1711, and a prominent man in the town and county. He died Feb. 7, 1735-6.

His wife, Rebecca, survived him, and it is understood, died Dec. 19, 1758. She was the daughter of John and Hannah Doane of Eastham. Her grandfather was Dea. John Doane, one of the first who settled in Eastham in 1645, and a deacon of the Plymouth Church. Her mother, Hannah, was a daughter of Edward Bangs who came in the Ann in 1623, and also a settler of Eastham in 1645.

Many of the descendants of Elisha and Rebecca Paine now write their names Payne.

By ALBERT W. PAINE, ESQ., of Bangor, Me.

WILLIAM PAINE.

Other Characteristics.

It was not solely as an enterprising man of property that Mr. Paine was distinguished. Other important traits of character tended to make him a valuable member of society and to be regarded with high esteem in the community. He was eminently a man of a high moral standard in all his relations of life and business. He was also a generous man, a worthy descendant of him whose death is recorded with the impressive term of "generosus" affixed to his name. Such indeed was the record made of both him and his brother during their residence at Ipswich. His large property was ever treated as means for advancing the public weal, and it would seem that in his investments he had an eye to that use of it that would do the most good. Hence we find that all his efforts at wealth were of a character to give employ to others. His Iron Works at Lynn, Beverly and New Haven, his mills at Watertown, the Lead Mines at Sturbridge, his shipping and (probably) ship-building, his adventures to England and Jamaica, his "Free Adventurers" enterprise in Western Massachusetts, his extensive farming operations and his large trading establishments at Boston and Piscataqua, were all of a character to give employment to a great number of laborers and others necessarily connected with the undertakings.

Boston Merchant.

During the last five or six years of his life he was an active merchant of Boston, enjoying a character for wealth, and having unmistakably a large credit and exercising his trade on an extensive scale. Judging from the inventory of his estate as rendered in Probate, after his death, he must have carried an immense stock of goods of all conceivable varieties, that the wants of a new country could possibly demand, a variety which could scarcely be outdone by all the stores on Broadway or Washington Street of the present day, if we exclude all newly-invented articles from the list. The inventory may still be seen in Probate, and is of very great length, covering several pages of foolscap paper, and embracing every variety of merchandise that the wants of the community could suggest in every branch of business. Besides the various kinds of goods on hand, the schedule contains parts of five vessels, his Iron Works at Lynn and Braintree, mills at Watertown, mill privilege at Exeter, land in Ipswich, dwelling house and furniture at Boston, an adventure to England £289, to Jamaica £52, demands due him "certain £1500," "accounted of as doubtful £700," accounted of as utterly lost and desperate £836, 6. 2." His whole estate "exclusive of debts due him," amounted to £4239. 11. 5." and he is reported as "in debt £1500."

A peculiar feature is noticeable with reference to this inventory, which goes to confirm what has been written respecting his character for charity and benevolence. The cash system of trade was not with him evidently a rule of business. On the contrary a most liberal system of credit seems to have been adopted, having especial regard to the wants of his poorer neighbors. One would naturally infer that he turned away no one who would buy goods on credit, for the reason that he was poor. The result was that his credit sheet was so extensive among the needy classes. We can hardly otherwise account for the excessive amount of bad and doubtful debts due him when he came to die.

Educational.

In other ways he shewed the same spirit of a public benefactor and one who was in advance of his age in matters of public improvement and enterprise. One of the first objects of his ambition as a citizen of the "new world," was the advancement of education among the common people. In promotion of this cause he and his brother were the two foremost and most active of the small company of men who established and endowed the "Free School" at Ipswich. That school, thus originated, still exists after nearly two hundred and thirty years, doing its work partly upon the same fund which they so long ago furnished, the annual income now received being about $330 per year. In his will he made a further bequest of a lot of land near the mouth of the river and known as "Jefferies Neck," which he devised to the feoffees of the school, to be held inalienable forever, "not to be sold or wasted." These lands, like the school, are still doing their work.

Will &c.

Mr. Paine died October 10, 1660, leaving a will executed about a week before his death, which was duly probated and is now on file in the Probate Office in Boston. The document is long and minute, drawn evidently by a professional hand. By it he made a donation of £20 to Harvard College, small pecuniary donations to eight clergymen settled over churches in Boston, Watertown, Ipswich, Sudbury, Chelmsford and Rowley, £1500 to the children of his daughter Hannah Appleton, certain devises to his wife and other relatives and all the remainder to his son John, after providing that "if my executors shall see just cause for some pious use and necessary work to give £100 they shall have power to take it out of my estate." The will as also his letters were signed with a spelling of his name the same as now adopted by his descendants, "Paine."

The facts now detailed have been compiled at a great expense of labor among the very numerous sources of information and now for the first time brought together, after a lapse of about two and a half centuries. The facts are believed to be a true and reliable account of a man of whom the country at the time and all his descendants may justly feel proud. No one can read his history without the conviction that he was among the foremost of the early inhabitants of the Colony, a man to be honored for his real merits as one of the most useful and public spirited men of his day.

Of the five children who came with him to his new home in America, three died before himself without issue. His daughter Anna, or Hannah, married Samuel Appleton and had died, leaving three children. John survived him and became possessed of his large estate, except only such as he gave to others, and was made executor of his will.

ROBERT PAINE, Sen.

ROBERT PAINE, brother of William, was born in Suffolk County, England, in 1601. Married Ann, the daughter of John Whiting of Hadleigh, in the same county, and with her emigrated to America in about the year 1640. He settled in Ipswich, and as has already been stated, was one of the persons to whom the Legislature made a grant of land, "with leave to settle a village there." He was made freeman January 2, 1641, and continued to live there until his death. His wife Ann died and he married Dorcas — whom he survived two or three years. He was a man of much importance in his day and one who was almost constantly called to the performance of public and private trusts. Being, like his brother, a man of good estate, he was liberal in its use and thus made himself to be regarded as a public benefactor, as well as a useful citizen. To such an extent was this the case that the local historian of the time wrote of him as a "right Godly man and one whose estate hath holpen on well the work of this little commonwealth." He sustained the principal offices of the town, was one of its original incorporators, and feoffee of the Free, or Grammar School, towards the establishment and endowment of which, with his brother, he was a chief party. He was the ruling elder in the first church of his town and, as the Historian of Ipswich relates "his profession and office were adorned by a life of active, exemplary usefulness." In 1647, 8 and 9 he was Deputy to the General Court, as the representative of his town, was on the Committee of trade for Essex in 1655, and held the office of County Treasurer from 1665 until he resigned, just before his death.

In furtherance of the cause of the Grammar, or Free School, besides his pecuniary donations, he gave the use of a dwelling house and two acres of land to its master in 1652 or 3, and after his death his son Robert and wife gave the property outright to the town for the use of the School. It has ever since remained the town's property, for the same use, until 1880, when it was sold and the fund invested for the same purpose. Gage says of him: "He had a good estate and was liberal in the use of it." He died in 1684 leaving two sons both born in Ipswich, viz: John Paine and Robert Paine, Jr.

ELIZABETH PAINE, sister of William and Robert married William Hammond who emigrated to America in 1632 and was admitted freeman May 25, 1636. His wife followed him in 1634 in the ship Francis, she being then forty-seven years old. "He is related as having a good estate," and settled in Ipswich, where descendants of them may still be found. He died October 8, 1662, at the age of ninety-four years. They had five children, viz: William, Ann, John, Ann and Thomas.

DOROTHY PAINE, another sister, married Simon Eyre, both of whom came over to America in the Increase with William in 1635. He was a surgeon by profession, of much eminence in his day, a man largely trusted, not only for his professional skill, but also for his probity and good business habits. He settled in Watertown and was admitted freeman April 17, 1637. He represented his town in General Court as delegate in 1641, was Selectman from 1637 to 1643 inclusive, and Town Clerk from 1641 to 1645. He afterwards moved to Boston where his wife died August 11, 1650. They had ten children, all but two of whom were born in England, viz: Marie, Thomas, Simon, Rebecca, Christian, Ann, Benjamin, Sarah, Jonathan and Dorothy. The name was frequently written "Ayres," and is probably the original name of the "Ayers" in America. He died November 10, 1658.

PHEBE PAINE, a third sister of William and Robert, married John Page of Dedham, England, and came over with their two children to America in same ship with Gov. Winthrop in 1630. He took the oath of fidelity May 18, 1631 and settled in Watertown, where he continued to reside for the remainder of his life. In September 1630 was by the Court appointed the first constable of the town. His house was burnt April 21, 1631. Gage speaks of "his wife and two children whose sufferings the first winter were duly thought of by his former minister, blessed John Rogers." He died December 18, 1676 at the age of about ninety and his widow September 25, 1677, aged eighty-seven. Their children were William (?), John, Samuel, Daniel, Elizabeth, Mary, Phebe and Joseph.

8.

JOHN PAINE, son of Thomas and Mary Paine of Eastham, was born, according to his own statement, March 14, 1660-1. For his first wife he married Bennet Freeman, March 14, 1689. She dying, for his second wife he married Alice Mayo, March 3, 1719-20. He was admitted a freeman in June, 1690. In 1693 he was elected a Selectman of Eastham, and afterwards held the office five years. He was chosen clerk of the town in 1703, and was re-elected yearly until 1729. He was Treasurer from 1709 to 1730, and a Representative to the General Court at Boston in 1703, 1709, 1714, 1716, 1718, 1724, and in 1725. He was often chosen an agent by the town to transact important business; and was frequently called upon by parties to settle disputes respecting titles to land in various parts of the County, and to settle such other matters of importance that needed arbitration among his townsmen, and among the people of the neighboring towns. Mr. Paine was an esteemed member of the church at Eastham, and for many years was a deacon. By trade his descendants say he was a "whale-boat builder;" and there is some evidence that he was interested in the whale fishery. He was of a literary turn of mind, and some of his spare moments were devoted to literary pursuits. A portion of a diary kept by him, in which are entries as early as 1695 and as late as 1717 in prose and poetry, is yet extant, in the possession of a descendant. His death occurred after a long illness, October 26, 1731, and he was interred in the old churchyard in the town of Orleans, which was then the South Precinct of Eastham, where a slatestone marks the spot with this inscription:

HERE LYES BURIED THE BODY OF MR. JOHN PAINE,
AGED 70 YEARS, 7 MONTHS AND 12 DAYS,
DECEASED OCT. YE 26, 1731.

The will of John Paine is recorded at Barnstable, and is a lengthy document, too long to be given in full in this paper. It bears date July 14, 1731. He mentions wife, Alice, who, "in special consideration for extraordinary care and trouble in tending" him in his "long illness," was well considered. He mentions sons, John, William, Theophilus and Thomas Paine, and daughters Mary Freeman, Sarah Knowles, Elizabeth Snow, Rebecca Paine, Mercy Paine, Alice Paine and Hannah Paine. Executors mentioned were John and William Paine, the two eldest sons. Witnesses to the will were Nathaniel Mayo, Samuel Higgins and Jonathan Higgins, Jr., who evidently were his neighbors.

The precise spot where his house stood cannot be pointed out with certainty. It is in the present town of Orleans, and not far southwardly of the old churchyard where his ashes now repose.

BENNET FREEMAN, the first wife of Dea. John Paine, was daughter of Maj. John and Mercy (Prence) Freeman of Eastham. She was born in March, 1671. She died very suddenly, May 30,* 1716, aged "five and forty years, two months and five and twenty days." She was, says his diary, "a pleasant companion, a most loving and obedient wife, a tender and compassionate mother, a kind mistress, a courteous neighbor, and a steady and fast friend; but above all and that which crowned all she was a good Christian; one that delighted to attend the worship of God both in public and private, and was not a stranger to closet communion with God. But, alas! alas!! The temple wherein this blessed soul did dwell is lain in the dust, there to abide till the ressurection of the just; then by the almighty power of God to be raised in glory . . . . where, I hope, through the riches of free grace to meet her; and till then adieu my dearest mate." She was buried in the southeast part of the old burying ground in Eastham, in which reposes the dust of her parents, and a rough stone, bearing her name and year of her death, marks the spot.

ALICE FREEMAN, the second wife of Dea. Paine, was a daughter of Nathaniel Mayo, and great grand-daughter of Rev. John Mayo, and Gov. Thomas Hinckley, and was born in 1686. She died at Eastham, October 12, 1748, in her 63d year. She was buried in the churchyard at Orleans beside her husband, where a stone marks the spot with this inscription:

* Dea. John Paine in his diary says her death occurred "on the thirteenth of May, Anno Domini, 1716;" but Moses Paine, his nephew, then a young man residing in the family, in his diary says: "May ye 13, 1716, being Lord's Day I went to meeting" and heard "Mr. Treat" preach; and "May ye 30, 1716, my Uncle John Paine's wife died, and that very suddenly." Dea. Paine, it is evident, intended to have written it thirtieth instead of "thirteenth."

9.

NICHOLAS PAINE, son of Thomas and Mary Paine of Eastham, settled in Eastham. His wife was Hannah, but who her parents were, is not as yet known. The date of their marriage the records of Eastham do not show. She died, say the Eastham Records, January 24. 1731-2. He appears not have been much in public employment. As it may be seen, his father by will, gave him a greater part of his real estate, including the homestead at Keeskokagansett now included in the township of Orleans, but then in the south precinct of Eastham. It is supposed he resided with his father the latter years of his life, and attended him in his last days. Nicholas Paine died in the autumn of 1733, at the supposed age of about three score and ten.

The following is a copy verbatim, of his last will as recorded at Barnstable:

"In the name of God. Amen. The twentyth ninth day of of July, 1732, I Nicholas Paine of Eastham, in the County of Barnstable, within the Province of Massachusetts Bay in New England, laboring under the infirmities of old age but of perfect mind and memory; therefore calling to mind the mortality of my body, and knowing it is appointed for all men once to die, do make and ordain this my last will and testament—that is to say—principally and first of all I give and recommend my soul into the hands of God that gave it, and my body I recommend to the earth to be buried in a decent christian burial at the discretion of my Executors, nothing doubting but at the general ressurection I shall recieve the same again by the mighty power of God; and as touching such worldly estate wherewith it hath pleased God to bless me with in this life, I give, demise and dispose of the same in the following manner and form. Imprs. I give all and singular my lands and meadows, together with my house and barn which I have in the town of Eastham, unto my son in law, William Norcut, and his wife, Precillah, my daughter, and to their heirs and assigns forever.

Item. I give unto my two grand children namely Thankful Smith and Lois Freeman, thirty shillings apiece out of my moveable estate; and after my just debts and funeral charges are paid, I give the remainder of my moveable estate unto my two daughters in equal shares, namely: to my daughter Abigail Higgins and Lydia Young, forever. I do constitute, make and ordain my *cousin, William Paine, my sole Executor of this my last will and testament by me made—ratifying and confirming this and no other to be my last will and testament. In witness witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and seal, the day and year above written.

NICHOLAS PAINE.

Signed, sealed, pronounced and declared by the said Nicholas Paine to be his last will and testament, in witness of

James Cole
Eleazar Cole
Israel Cole.

* Nephew was intended.

The will was presented for probate November 15, 1733, and his estate was appraised December 12, 1733, at £512, 3s.

The following extract from the will of Capt. Samuel Knowles, which bears date June, 1750, shows into whose hands the Paine estate fell, and some important facts, relative to it:—

Item. I give and bequeath to my eldest son, Enos Knowles, his heirs and assigns, forever, the dwelling house I bought of William Norcut, with the land adjoining on the west side of the way that leads from Jonathan Sparrow's to Joshua Treat's, with an orchard on it, being about four acres in all; together with about fifty-four acres of land on the east side of said way where the barn stands, with the barn, which fifty-four acres is bounded as follows, to wit: beginning by said road and then running easterly to the Saltwater, being a cove, and then across sd. cove upon a straight line to the westerly end of the fence that divides the Hamilton's meadow from mine, and then along by the bay, and so around a point of upland that contains about five acres; and so still along by said bay to the next inlet or cove, running around another point of upland to the head of the last mentioned cove, and from the south west corner of sd. cove to the road first mentioned, to make up fifty-four acres in all on that side of the way and no more."

The tract of four acres on which was the house, is now owned and occupied by James Percival. The other tract of fifty-four acres, is now owned by Tracy Kenney, Freeman Kingman and others, and adjoins Higgins' Cove which was then known to the Indians, as well as to the settlers of Eastham, as "Keeskakogansett" or "Kescayogansett." The two tracts are now, as then, separated by a road. A rock was taken from the tract on the easterly side of the road in 1868, bearing the letters N. P. It was below the hill on which stood a wind mill of Nicholas Paine. These tracts undoubtedly belonged to the homestead of Thomas Paine, and given by him to Nicholas as will be seen by the will.

10.

JAMES PAINE, son of Thomas and Mary Paine of Eastham, was born July 6, 1665. He was admitted a townsman at Barnstable, May 29, 1689. He was an enterprising and a highly respected citizen. He was a school teacher, miller, cooper and clerk. He was in the expedition against Canada in 1691, led by Sir William Phipps, and in Capt. John Gorham's Company, and is mentioned as "clerk." For services in Capt. Gorham's Company his heirs in 1736, received a grant of land in Maine. Like his brother John, he was of a literary turn of mind. He was a member of the first church in Barnstable until the organization of the second, when he was granted a letter of dismissal at his own request, and became a member. He was first clerk of the East Precinct or Parish in Barnstable and served many years. He died at Barnstable, November 12, 1728.

He married Bethiah Thacher of Yarmouth, April 9, 1691. She was the daughter of Col. John Thacher, and grand-daughter of Mr. Anthony Thacher one of the early settlers of Yarmouth. Col. John was a very prominent man in the Colony. He was a Colonel, and many years Councilor of Massachusetts. Her brother, Peter Thacher, was Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas. She died at Barnstable, July 7, 1734. She made her will September 4, 1733.. It was proved July 31, 1734.

II.

JOSEPH PAINE, son of Thomas and Mary Paine of Eastham, married Patience Sparrow of Eastham, May 27, 1691. He removed to that part of Harwich, now Brewster, before 1700 and settled. He was one of the eight who formed there the first church, October 17, 1700. He was selectman of the town in 1701, and by successive election, held this office till 1711. He succeeded Thomas Freeman as town clerk in 1706, and held the office by successive elections till his death. He was usually known among his townsmen as "Ensign Paine." He had doubtless been Ensign of a company of Militia in early life. He has been spoken of by his nephew, Joshua Paine, in his journal, who states "he was very stout and flung Coll. Thacher the champion of the Bay State at Commencement." This athletic feat was doubtless done in early life.

The death of Joseph Paine is thus alluded to by Dea. John Paine in his journal:—"On the first day of October, 1712, my brother, Joseph Paine, departed this life; and on the thirteenth of the same month my brother, Samuel Paine, departed and fell asleep, both of them leaving comfortable hopes that they slept in Christ." He further says: "Indeed, I have cause, with sorrow of heart to bewail and lament the awful strokes of the rod of God upon me in taking away two of my natural brothers who were dear to me; yea, after my most earnest prayers and supplications to Heaven for the sparing of their lives; yet nevertheless, there was mercy mingled with this affliction, and honey with this gall in that they both departed under comfortable circumstances as to their eternal estate." The good deacon was, it seemed, preserved from "that sore sickness which carried away" his two brothers, though his "dear son Benjamin" had it "in so terrible a manner as that they even despaired of his life."

The estate of Joseph Paine was settled by his widow Patience. It was appraised at £497, 13s, 7d, and divided in 1718. The homestead was set off to Ebenezar, the eldest son.

Patience Paine, the wife of "Ensign" Joseph Paine, was the daughter of Jonathan Sparrow, Esq., of Eastham, by his wife Hannah, daughter of Gov. Thomas Prence. Jona. Sparrow, Esq., was a very prominent man in Eastham. He held many offices in town and Colony, and died in 1706. Patience Paine for second husband married John Jenkins of Barnstable, Nov. 23, 1715. At that place she died "above seventy years" of age, October 28, 1745. By Mr. Jenkins she had a daughter Patience.

OBITUARY.

GEN. ANTHONY MARVINE PAINE, a widely known and highly respected citizen of Delaware Co., N. Y., died at his residence in Delhi, March 10, 1881, aged 80 years. He was a son of Dr. Asahel E. Paine, many years ago a popular physician of the district, and a descendant—in the seventh generation—from Stephen Paine, the founder of the "Rehoboth" branch of the family. Gen. Paine was a native of the County in which he spent his long and useful life, and with the history and people of which he was probably better acquainted than any living person. For almost fifty years he was editor of the DELAWARE GAZETTE, the leading Democratic journal of the County, and one of the most influential country papers in the State. Recognized by his fellow citizens of all parties and classes as a man of reliable integrity and executive ability, though never seeking office, he was always serving in various stations of civil or financial responsibility. There are few positions of local importance that he did not occupy at one time or another in the course of his life, some of them for many successive years. At different periods he served as Justice of the Peace, Supervisor, County Treasurer, &c., to the satisfaction of all parties. He was a Director of the local Bank, from its organization; a Trustee, and for fifteen years President of the Delaware Academy; and at various times a Vestryman of the Episcopal Church, of which he was a regular attendant and supporter. He was a promoter of all judicious schemes for extending the agricultural and other industries of the County, and encouraging education. With unaffected manners and an obliging disposition, he was alike a favorite with young and old, as was testified by the large numbers who attended his funeral, not only of his own townsmen, but of many from a distance.

Mr. Paine was an industrious and successful farmer, a man of imposing appearance and ardent patriotism, and has been a representative to the State Legislature. His wife and himself were respected members of the Congregational Church in East Woodstock, where he died Feb. 17, 1870. They had two children, viz.:

222. JOHN (VII.), born January 12, 1812; married May 16, 1836. Mary Ann May, b. June 4, 1812, daughter of Chester and Hannah (Lyman) May, of Woodstock, and granddaughter of Rev. Eliphalet Lyman, who was pastor of the First Church in Woodstock, from 1779 to 1824, and died 1836, aged 82 years.

Mr. Paine has been one of the leading public men of his native town, and has held a number of offices of trust; is a director in the Putnam Savings Bank, and an influential Church member. He is a practical farmer, and occupies the farm whereon he was born, that was formerly owned by Capt. Samuel Chandler (42) in the Northeast corner of Woodstock. The children of John and Mary Ann were: MARY ANN, HARRIET MAY, JOHN MERRICK, GEORGE ALBERT and ALBERT GEORGE, twins, and LYMAN MAY.

No children. Mr. Paine died August 25, 1872.

Few, if any, of the citizens of Woodstock have been more highly esteemed in their native town than was Mr. Paine. He was their Probate Judge for several years, Representative to the State Legislature in 1852, was twice elected to the State Senate. He was also Commissioner of the School Fund of the State, and held several minor offices, in all of which his record is untarnished, his honesty and ability being acknowledged, even by the enemies of the party which he represented. He was also much esteemed for his highly exemplary Christian conduct and character, as well as widely known and respected for his sterling integrity, his moral worth, and his ever invaluable example. He was for several years an honored deacon in the Congregational Church, and took especial interest in its Sabbath School, giving liberally toward the support of both, during the forty-one years of his membership, and he was active and engaged at all proper times in speaking for the cause of his Redeemer.

Mr. Paine, like his father and his brother William, was a man of more than ordinary stature and development, and being naturally endowed with strong physical and mental powers, he was enabled to do a greater amount of labor than most men.

He was an unusually trustworthy young man, of excellent morals, and good business qualifications, and enjoyed the full confidence of his employers, as a clerk, in Boston. But in his ambition he overrated his powers of endurance, and broke down under an attack of consumption. Burnside's Division, in North Carolina, and afterwards transferred to the Army of the Potomac, and was in the fierce campaign of 1862, when it lost its Colonel, Lieut. Colonel, and 181 men. In 1864 it composed part of the force against Richmond, fighting its way in line of battle past the Half-Way House. He fought in the battles of South Mountain, Antietam and Fredericksburg in Md.; in Suffolk, Swift's Creek, Drury's Bluff, Cold Harbor, and the battles before Petersburg. Volunteers. He was promoted to the office of Corporal, and his regiment was prominent in the battle at New Market, Va., on the 15th of May. In the battle at Piedmont, Va., on the 5th of June, 1864, he was wounded and taken prisoner, and died in the hospital at Winchester, Va., Aug. 10, 1864. His remains were afterwards removed to East Woodstock. No children.

In the year 1861, Aug. 13, Charles enlisted in Battery B, First Regiment R. I. Light Artillery, and the same day started for Washington, and was in the battles before Yorktown, previous to the evacuation. Fired the first gun at the battle of Fair Oaks. Was in position at Peach Orchard, Savage's Station, White Oak Swamp, Malvern Hill, South Mountain, Antietam. At battle of Fredericksburg expended 384 rounds of solid shot on the enemies sharp shooters' rifle pits, crossed on the pontoon bridge to within 275 yards of the Rebel line, where we fired rapidly for an hour, to give confidence to the infantry while making the charge; where General Howard said he thought they would all be killed by the terrific Rebel fire. On the 3d of July at the battle of Gettysburg, Battery B sustained a heavy loss of horses and men. In the early part of the engagement Mr. Paine was wounded in the leg by a bomb-shell that exploded near him, and he remained on the field in a small tent until the 7th, when he was removed to the hospital at Fort Schuyler, N. Y., and later at Portsmouth Grove, R. I., where he remained about eight months. He was again ordered to the front, and was engaged in the battles of the Wilderness, Spottsylvania, North Anna, Cold Harbor, Deep Bottom, Petersburg, and was honorably discharged August 12, 1864. Herbert L. (533) was an artist, for which profession he early gave evidence of unusual talent. At the age of fourteen he completed a marine view, his first painting in oil, which he presented to his father for a birthday gift, who was greatly surprised and gratified by this evidence of genius on the part of his son. In 1877 he exhibited two fine pieces at the Brooklyn Academy of Design. They were a Fruit Piece and a Bust of Homer.

His former studio at his father's residence in Brooklyn is adorned by many excellent pictures of landscapes. His work abounds in illustrations of a delicacy of touch, accuracy of delineation, and truthfulness to nature, which indicate a high order of talent. Most of his pieces are studies directly from nature.

He also displayed considerable ability in the department of music. He was a fine singer and an accomplished organist. He composed and performed some very beautiful and difficult pieces.

homers of three and foure of the clocke in the morninge. Anno Re<sup>no</sup> & Elizabeth<sup>e</sup> 1584

He was a young man of remarkable ability; one who gave great promise, during his short life, of attaining a high position in the department of art for which he seemed so thoroughly qualified.

Although during the last few months of his life the evidences of early dissolution became painfully apparent, yet his quiet, patient resignation to the will of Providence; his unwavering faith in and love of the Saviour, increasing with the decline of bodily strength, were a constant source of comfort to his bereaved parents, and gave abundant evidence of a peaceful entrance into a blessed immortality, and an heir to "an inheritance incorruptible, undefiled and that fadeth not away."

THE ORIGINAL RECORD OF THE SOUTHOLD AND DEDHAM BRANCHES OF THE PAINE FAMILY.

A fac-simile copy of this ancient manuscript is furnished with this number of the Paine Family Records.

A literal rendering of it was first published in the New England Historical and Genealogical Register of July, 1851, premised by the following introductory statement:

"The following curious record of the Payne, or Paine family, who came early to Salem, and finally settled at Dedham, Mass., has been put into the editor's hands, by a lady of the latter place, with liberty to publish it. Although we apply the very common term curious to this record, it is truly a very uncommon curiosity according to our antiquarian notions of things in that line. The writing from which this copy is made, was begun in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, and was added to, from time to time, as the family of which it is a record increased or diminished; and when the family came to New England, they undoubtedly brought it with them, as the entries upon it show a different date, the last of which is, as will be seen, 1636."

The record furnishes a sketch of three generations, and embraces a period in the history of the family of ninety-six years, viz.: from the birth of Thomas 1st, in 1540, to the death of his grandchild in 1636.

It is impossible, in an engraving on stone, to represent the marks of age, the blots and stains, the numerous patches, the appearance and quality of the paper, which are characteristic of the original document, stamp it with unquestioned evidences of authenticity, and greatly enhance its real value. The color of the paper on which the fac-simile is printed, is as near that of the original as can be conveniently obtained. In the original, the entries are made on both sides of the sheet; in the fac-simile, only on one, in order that it may be more easily examined if framed for preservation.

NATHANIEL PAINE, OF REHOBOTH, AND HIS DESCENDANTS.

BY GEO. T. PAINE.

NATHANIEL PAINE, fourth son of Stephen and Ann (Chickering) Paine (see vol. 1, pp. 19-23, also chart No. 1, opposite p. 100,) was born at Rehoboth, Nov. 20, 1667, and having always lived there may properly be styled "Nathaniel of Rehoboth," to distinguish him from his cousin of the same name, who has been called "of Bristol." (see vol. 1, p. 38.) He was interested in lands in Rehoboth, Swanzev and Bristol. He married, May 1, 1694, Dorothy Chaffee, and as his cousin Nathaniel, "of Bristol," married Dorothy Rainsford, and they were contemporaries and died about the same time, it has been a matter of some difficulty to separate the Probate Records of Plymouth colony relating to their estates.

The children of Nathaniel and Dorothy were:

- |               |               |
|---------------|---------------|
| 1. DOROTHY,   | 4. JONATHAN,  |
| 2. NATHANIEL, | 5. RACHEL,    |
| 3. ABIGAIL,   | 6. ELIZABETH. |

Nathaniel died March 25, 1718, and his wife soon followed, May 16, same year. His son Nathaniel was appointed Administrator June 2, 1718. The estate inventory amounted to £904, 1, 10.

First Generation.

1. DOROTHY, was born Feb. 3, 1694-5. In 1723, Feb. 26, she sells to her brother Nathaniel her interest in her father's estate, and in April, 1725, followed her parents to the unknown world.

2. NATHANIEL, was born May 24, 1697, and was barely 21 when he was appointed to administer on his father's estate. He married (probably 1720-1) Abigail Smith. She was sister of James Smith of Barrington. Their children were:

- |             |               |
|-------------|---------------|
| 7. ABIGAIL, | 9. NATHANIEL, |
| 8. DOROTHY, | 10. JOHN.     |

He appears to have been a young man of uncommon prudence, as he purchased at various times the interests of his four sisters in their father's estate. His grave stone at Rehoboth records the death of "Ensign Nathaniel Paine, April 5, 1738 in his 41st year." His widow, Abigail, was appointed his administrator May 18, 1738.

3. ABIGAIL, the third child was born July 28, 1699 and died August 31, 1699.

4. JONATHAN, was born July 2, 1701. His father died when he was 16 years old, and in accordance with the law, he chose his own guardian, John Chaffee, probably a relative of his mother. On July 6, 1722, he received his share of his father's estate, inventoried at £807, 10, 2, but whether that was the value of his portion, or of the whole estate is not clear. May 26, 1723, he married Rebecca, dau. of Noah and Hannah (Winters) Peck. She was born in 1702, and died about 1745. Their children were:

11. JONATHAN,	15. DAVID,
12. NATHANIEL,	16. SAMUEL,
13. NOAH,	17. JOSEPH.
14. DARIUS,

He died at Rehoboth, Sept. 17, 1740, and his son Jonathan was administrator.

5. RACHEL, born July 13, 1705. She was placed under guardianship of Samuel Brown, May 4, 1719. She married Dec. 6, 1723, Timothy Borden, of Middleborough, Mass., and in 1725 disposes of her interest in her father's estate to her brother Nathaniel.

6. ELIZABETH, born April 15, 1712. Nathaniel Peck was appointed her guardian, May 17, 1726, probably by her selection, as she was then over 14. She married March 27, 1729, Joshua Lyon, and May 10, 1735 she was baptized. Their child, Dorothy, was baptized May 4, 1734. In 1733 she disposes of her interest in her father's land to her brother Nathaniel.

Second Generation.

Children of Nathaniel (2) and Abigail.

7. ABIGAIL, born July 12, 1722; married June 19, 1740, Joseph Wheaton. So say the Rehoboth town records, but on the Probate Records at Taunton, appears the following:

"April 21, 1741: Nathaniel Wheaton is appointed guardian of his wife, Abigail, daughter of Nathaniel Paine of Bristol."

[Probably the first name, Joseph, is correct. Her father died in 1738. Nathaniel, of Bristol, had no dau. Abigail and he died 1729; but his widow as his administratrix, rendered her final account at this time. Hence, perhaps, arose the above complication.]

8. DOROTHY, born Feb. 15, 1723-4. Was 15 years old when her father died. She chose Timothy Ide for her guardian April 21, 1741. but her marriage to him June 8, same year, gave him unquestioned control. Her child, Nathaniel, was a legatee of his uncle John Paine (10) in 1778.

9. NATHANIEL, born May 9, 1728, was placed under guardianship of his mother's brother, James Smith. On coming of age in 1749, he buys land at Watchemoket, (now E. Providence). In 1778 he is made residuary legatee of his brother John's estate. He married, but whom and when has not yet been ascertained. There is record however of the following children:

- |                                 |                         |
|---------------------------------|-------------------------|
| 18. SARAH, mar. Nathaniel Peck, | 20. JOHN,               |
| 19. MARY, mar. Percy Read,      | 21. ABIGAIL, mar. Kent. |

10. JOHN, was born Oct. 17, 1738. His mother was appointed guardian. He probably died unmarried, as his will dated 1778, leaves £5 to nephew Nathaniel Ide, and residue to his brother Nathaniel.

The venerable ROBERT PAINE, the senior Bishop of the Methodist Ep. Church, South, is publishing in the Nashville Christian Advocate, a series of interesting and valuable "Notes," or sketches of his long and eventful life.

On account of the number and length of the papers comprising this issue of the Records, it has been necessary to enlarge its dimensions to thirty-two pages. Notwithstanding this additional space, however, several communications that have been marked for insertion, are still unavoidably postponed.

Among those that have been longest waiting, is the continuation of the elder branch of the Rehoboth family; which will be resumed in the next number.

Correspondents are again exhorted to practise condensation in their manuscripts intended for publication, as far as is consistent with clearness and accuracy.

Fourth Generation.

EBENEZAR PAINÉ, son of Samuel and Patience Paine, of Eastham, was a "whaleman," and resided, it is understood, in Eastham. He was a master of a whaler, and during the spring of 1734, his vessel was run down in a dark night near Nantucket shoals, and sunk with all hands on board. The loss was a severe one to the family of the master. The widow, Hannah, took out letters of administration, May 2, 1734. The estate of "Mr. Ebenezar Paine, whaleman," was appraised July 3, 1734, by Samuel Freeman, John Knowles, jr. and Samuel Knowles. He belonged to the military company and was a drum major. His wife, Hannah, was daughter of Joshua and Mary Hopkins, and was married December 13, 1721. Joshua Hopkins was a wealthy citizen of Eastham, of that part now Orleans, and a son of Giles Hopkins, of the same place, who came from London with his father, Stephen, in the Mayflower in 1620. The mother of Hannah Paine, the widow, was Mary, daughter of Daniel Cole, of Eastham.

In 1742, wid. Hannah united in marriage with Lieut. Zachariah Small, a "well to do" citizen of Harwich. By him she had a daughter, Jane, who married John Long, and who hung herself in a state of mental aberration, Nov. 5, 1778. After the death of Lieut. Small in 1778, the widow went to reside with her only surviving son, Ebenezar Paine, where she died Oct. 24, 1793, in the 93d year of her age. She lies buried in the old cemetery at Harwich, by the side of her last husband.

She "died July 10th, in the year 1749, about the fifty-third year of her age." They lie buried at Truro; stones marking the spots. A portion of a journal kept by him has been preserved. Most of the entries were made during the years 1716 and 1717. The last entry by him was in 1749, noticing the death of his "beloved wife." Many items of family history are found scattered through it. He made his will Sept. 8, 1764, and it was presented for Probate, Dec. 4, 1764. His only son, Moses, was Executor. He mentions son Moses; dau. ## 37.

JOSHUA PAINE, son of Thomas and Hannah Paine, of Truro, was by trade a blacksmith, and followed the business for a number of years in Truro, his native town. Sometime after 1725, he moved to Canterbury, Conn., where his uncle, Elisha Paine, had been a resident a great number of years. Here he united with the Church, and was a member, together with his wife, Rebecca, as early as 1730. In 1741, it appears, he was a member of the Church in Mortlake Parish, now included in the town of Brooklyn, Conn., over which the Rev. Ephriam Avery, a native of Truro, had the pastoral care. He was a member up to 1742, when, with his wife, Constance, and twenty-seven other members withdrew to unite with the "Separates," whose views he now endorsed. In 1749 he removed to the tract of the "Nine Partners," in the section now Amenia, Dutchess Co., N. Y., where he engaged in farming and blacksmithing. He died March 10, 1775, "and was buried," says the late Dr. L. C. Paine, of Albion, N. Y., who visited the place of his burial in 1856, "in the old cemetery near where the old red Meeting House stood, a little to northeast of Amenia village. There is no stone or other monument denoting the spot where his ashes repose; but an open spot was pointed out to me by Barnabas Paine, Esq., where, he said Joshua and Constance Paine, his grand-parents, were buried." He made his will June 16, 1774. He mentions wife, Constance; sons, Ephriam and Barnabas, living; daughters, Rebecca Dyer and Phebe Monro; and Rebecca, Joshua and Ichabod Sparrow Paine, children of his son, Ichabod Sparrow Paine, deceased. Wife Constance and son Barnabas, Executors. Will presented Oct. 6, 1775. Joshua Paine left in manuscript a journal in which are entries as early as 1719, when he was a resident of Truro. In the summer of 1856, when Dr. Paine visited Amenia, it was in the possession of Barnabas Paine, Esq., a grandson, and he copied much from it relating to the family.

Joshua Paine was twice married. He married for his first wife, Rebecca, daughter of Jonathon Sparrow, of Eastham, Oct. 20, 1720. She died at Canterbury, Sept. 15, 1736. For his second wife he married, Constance, daughter of his uncle Elisha Paine, and widow of William Baker, January 6, 1736-7. She was a zealous member of "Separate" Church, and died at Amenia, May 15, 1787. He was a man of means and note. He had three sons that were physicians. His son, Ephriam, was a distinguished man—a physician, lawyer and legislator.

JOHN HOWARD PAINE, author of "Home, Sweet Home," died while American Consul to Tunis, and was buried in the Protestant cemetery in that city. The English Chaplain at Tunis, taking advantage of the public attention directed to that point, asks for subscriptions for a memorial window in the church of St. Augustine to the poet. Recently ascertained facts have definitely established his genealogical relationship—heretofore undetermined—to the "Eastham" family of Paines.

IPSWICH BRANCH.

By ALBERT W. PAINE, ESQ., of Bangor, Me.

JOHN PAINE, son of William, was born in England, and came to this country with his father, at the age of three years. He succeeded his father in the various business undertakings, in which the latter was interested at the time of his death, and prosecuted them with zeal and industry. Besides these, he also added many others, being a man, as it would seem, of an ambitious character, and deeply interested in works of a public nature. A brief history of these has already been given under his name in No. 1 of the Records, and lack of space must be an excuse for not repeating it here. For the information of the reader it may be properly remarked that the various documents referred to, as connected with his Prudence Island, or "Sophy Manor" enterprise, are all now to be found among the unpublished manuscripts at Albany, in the State Department of New York. These include the "Patent" and "Commission" as Governor, and also the "Orders and Privileges for the Welfare and Good Government of Prudence Island," the latter being what may be called a "Constitution of State," whereby rights and privileges of the people and their Governor were instituted and defined, as well as enforced. The documents are all of a very curious nature and of especial interest to members of the family and all others interested in such matters. They are, however, of too great length to be inserted in such a periodical as the "Records." In the work just published by the writer entitled "Paine Genealogy, Ipswich Branch," verbatim copies of both the documents, as also of Mr. Paine's argument, before the Jury, on his trial for "intrusion," are given at length.

HANNAH PAINE, sister of John Paine, and daughter of William, was also born in England and came to this country with her father, at the age of eight years. She married Samuel Appleton, the ancestor of the Appletons of the present day, who have acted so conspicuous part in the history of the country. She died leaving three children, viz. :

Hannah, who married Wm. Downes and died leaving an only child, a daughter.

Judith, who married Samuel Walcott, of Windsor, Conn., and had eight children: Samuel, Josiah, Hannah, Sarah, Lucy, Abigail, Elizabeth and Mary.

Samuel, who married Elizabeth Whittington, a descendant of John Calvin's sister, by whom he had a son, Samuel, and two daughters, Hannah and Martha. This Samuel married John Gerrish's daughter, Anna, and died in 1728, leaving an only child, Samuel, who died young and unmarried. Hannah married William Clark in 1705, and Martha married Joseph Wise in 1708. The Paine-Appleton line thus became, in name, extinct. After the death of Hannah Paine Appleton, her husband married a second wife, Mary Oliver, from whom has descended the race now bearing the Appleton name.

JOHN PAINE, son of Robert, and thus cousin of John and Hannah, last treated of, was born at Ipswich, where he lived until manhood, and then moved to Nantasket (not Nantucket as related by Farmer). He resided there until his death, on July 13, 1677. On September 21, 1657, he married Elizabeth Coggsell, who survived him, having by him no children. After her first husband's death she married again, John Whipple, one of the appraisers on her first husband's estate. In 1666, Mr. Paine was admitted to the Artillery Company, an honor, in those days, of no small significance and importance. He is related to have died at sea, which is probably a mistake arising from the confusing of his name with that of his cousin, who did so die. His estate was administered upon by his wife, the inventory as rendered by her, and appraised by Mr. Whipple and John Appleton, being now on file in the Probate Court, at Salem, dated October 25, 1677.

ROBERT PAINE, JR., son of Robert, Sen., was also born at Ipswich, and graduated at Harvard University in the class of 1656. After graduation he studied for the ministry, and became a preacher, but whether settled over any particular church as pastor is not known. Felt, the historian, speaks of him as "preacher," and there is no doubt that he did practise as such. On July 10, 1666, he married Elizabeth Reiner, by whom he had four children, viz.: Elizabeth, born June 15, 1677, who married Daniel Smith, and died in 1717; John, born October 24, 1684; Robert, who died December 24, 1693; and Dorcas, who married Matthew Whipple, son of Lieut. Col. John Whipple. No children are reported as born of either.

It was during the active years of his life that the witchcraft excitement existed at Salem, and he was the Foreman of the Grand Jury which found the several bills of indictment against the "witches." An interesting incident connected with this delusion is very properly admissible here, growing out of Mr. Paine's action with reference to it.

Among the most important of all the influences which tended to break up and destroy the delusion, was a letter written on the subject to Judge Corwin, one of the presiding Justices of the Court, before which the "witches" were tried. The letter bears date August 9, 1692, and is signed by the initials "R. P.," under which are written the words "Robert Paine." The letter is still preserved by the "Essex Institute" at Salem, found among the papers left by Judge Corwin at his death, carefully filed away by him among his valuable documents.

Mr. Upham in his "History of Witchcraft" has a long dissertation on the subject of this letter, in which he discusses its merits as well as its authorship. "Whoever was its author," he says, "he did his duty nobly and stands alone above all the scholars and educated men of his time, in bearing testimony openly, bravely, in the very ears of the Court, against the disgraceful and shocking course they were pursuing." "It is truly a marvelous production, an intellectual phenomenon not easily to be paralleled."

With reference to the authorship of the letter, however, he doubts the claim of Mr. Paine, and ascribes its writing to Major Robert Pike. At the same time, he says of it that "it bears internal evidence of a theological education and a familiarity with matters that belong to the studies of a minister," which Mr. Paine was and Mr. Pike was not. The only reason given by Mr. Upham for doubting the authorship by Mr. Paine is that he was Foreman of the Jury, as already stated. The discussion which follows, and in which he spends his whole argument, is one between the Major and Mr. Paine, Sen., or "Elder Paine," he being ignorant of the fact that the latter had been dead eight years before the letter was written. The whole argument is, then, one based on a false or mistaken hypothesis, and of course the conclusion is altogether unreliable.

Space will not admit of a full presentation of the argument and facts, showing the justness of the claim now made in favor of him, whose name, as well as initials, are appended to the letter. The conclusion can hardly be doubted that the author of the letter was known to the person addressed, and that in filing the letter away as worthy of preservation, he placed the writer's name under the initials, as a memorandum of its real authorship.

The fact that the Foreman of the Jury should have written such a letter to the Judge, is no more surprising than that two months afterwards his fellow minister and collegemate, John Hale, should have been found resisting and fighting against the very same delusion, which he had but just before been using all his energies to support and enforce. History will undoubtedly bear out the allegation that the Judge, the Foreman and the Parson, all three of whom had been active supporters of the heresy, now joined hands in successful opposition to it, and to such an extent, that in a few short weeks, their whole work was accomplished. The custom, or habit of "crying out" against some friend, or relative of any person who opposed the illusion, as was the case with Judge Corwin's mother-in-law and Mr. Hale's wife, goes to show the truth of the hypothesis now stated. The relations of both Mr. Paine and Mr. Hale, it is believed, may justly claim, for their progenitors, the credit due for brave and successful work, in accomplishing the result of breaking up the wildest heresy of the age.

Augustus Payne (215) in the early part of his life resided with his father at Aquebogue, now Jamesport, N. Y., working on a farm until he became of age. He then acquired a practical knowledge of the mason's trade, and during the next two or three years, worked at that occupation in summer, a portion of one season in the city of New York, and taught a district school in winter.

In 1822 he left his father's home at Jamesport, to seek a residence in the central part of the State. His journey westward into what was then called "The New Country," is quaintly and minutely described. His journal shows that, on the 16th of March, 1822, he left his native place, embarking at Jamesport in the vessel "Liberty," Eli Aldrich, Captain, and arriving at New York on the fourth day. Leaving New York on the 24th instant by packet, he arrived at Albany on the 26th, thence by stage to Utica, arriving at evening the following day.

He purchased a small farm at Lairdsville, in the town of Westmoreland, Oneida county, dividing his time between farm and mason work.

He united with the Baptist Church at Lairdsville, the first of that denomination in the town of Westmoreland, December 28, 1828. He was an active and efficient member, leading the choir many years; also receiving the appointment and acting in the capacity of Deacon, Clerk and Trustee, until 1850, when the church disbanded, its members uniting with other Baptist churches in neighboring villages. He united with the Baptist Church at Clinton, July 6, 1850, where he retained membership the remainder of his life, and during the more active part was very regular in attendance.

He was pre-eminently an honest and industrious man; prudent and economical in the management of his business affairs; a liberal and careful provider for his family; and generous and conscientious in all public and private matters. Although he lived within half a mile of the village store and hotel, he was never known to spend an evening in idle conversation at either place. His evenings were spent with his family, usually in the reading aloud of some instructive or historical work.

He was an earnest supporter of Public schools, and for many years was honored by an appointment to some office in connection therewith.

He died at his residence, and was buried in the Lairds-ville cemetery. His widow, Mrs. Mary M. Payne (553), resides (1881) at Lairdsville, N. Y.

Extracts from statements published in the Clinton Courier of February 5, 1863:

"Last August he joined the 57th regiment. A few days before leaving home he uttered these memorable words: 'Men are needed to defend our country in this hour of trial; if all remain at home inevitable ruin of our free institutions will ensue. Perhaps I can be spared as easily as any one.'

"He was a man of excellent discernment; his life one in which purity, goodness, and truthfulness were illustrated, exhibiting the traits of an attractive and noble character. His quiet simplicity of manner, decision and energy, and his deep sense of justice were eminently worthy of imitation.

"He was influenced by lofty principles of fidelity and devotion to his country. His patriotic impulses and self-immolation were deep and unwavering. His was not a blind, fanatical zeal, promoted by partisan motives, but an enlightened enthusiasm impelled him to devote all his worldly interests to the maintenance of free institutions. In the annals of the beautiful region in which he lived for the period of one generation, his name will be remembered as one who sacrificed all the endearments of home upon the altar of his country."

WOODSTOCK BRANCH.

By ROYAL PAINE, OF BROOKLYN, N. Y.

190. Children of Daniel (VII) and Irene White, all born in South Hadley, Mass.
263. ELIZA (VIII.), born March 4, 1825, married August 23, 1858, Nathan S. Weeks, of Du Quoine, Ill., who in the war of the rebellion enlisted May 15, 1861, in Co. A, 18th Regt. Ill. Volunteers, being one of the first to respond to the call of our martyred President for volunteers in defence of our beloved country. He was in the battles of Fort Henry and Fort Donaldson, Tenn., and was killed at the latter, Feb. 15, 1862, and his body was taken home and buried at the same time and in the same grave with twenty of his fellow patriots.

Eliza married second, March 9, 1873, Benjamin E. Warner, of Rosemond, Ill., who was the youngest son of Benjamin Ruggles Warner and Hannah Nichols, and was born 1810, at Brookfield, Conn., and afterward removed to Barrington, Mass., to Hinsdale, Mass., and thence to Rosemond, Ill., in 1856, with a colony of five others who commenced the settlement of that place.

In her very early years Eliza manifested some of her father's fondness for mathematics, and for teaching. At the age of only eight years she went through "Practical Arithmetic," understanding it well, and at the age of fifteen she commenced teaching, and continued it, as her health would permit, during thirty years. In 1852, through the Boston Ladies' Education Society she went to Illinois as a missionary teacher, and founded the Du Quoine Female Seminary, and there married her first husband, in full anticipation of a missionary life in home or foreign lands. But he was one of those noble sacrifices appointed for his country's altar, early in the war, and she was left a widow, and in very feeble health. In what she calls her "Family Record," she has preserved the names and data of nearly five hundred of her pupils, most of whom she has seen enlisted in the service of Christ, and many go out as active Christian teachers. She resides at Rosemond.

268. Hattie May Saunders (IX.), born Aug. 30, 1860, who resides at Pana.

OBITUARIES.

DIED: At New London, Conn., May 8, 1881, ASA W. PAYNE, aged 67 years.

In Minneapolis, Minn., July 28, 1881, MARY MACKIE PAINE, of Providence, R. I., only daughter of Mrs. Sarah A. and the late Captain Amasa Paine, U. S. Navy, aged 40 years. (See vol. 1, p. 131.)

The following notice is condensed from the Living Church of Aug. 13:

The church in Providence, R. I., has sustained a grievous loss in the death of Miss Mary M. Paine, sister of the Rev. Robert H. Paine, of Mt. Calvary Church, Baltimore. She was eminently a church-worker, having been, up to the time of her departure, a leading and active member of the various parochial societies of St. John's parish, and an indefatigable visitor among the poor. Her influence with the young was remarkable. She was among the first workers in St. Mary's parish, in East Providence, which was founded by her brother. Her interest in all the work of St. Mary's continued unabated to the end. On Monday, Aug. 1, her remains were committed to the grave, in the presence of a very large gathering of mourners, among whom were her uncle, the Bishop of Quincy and Mrs. Burgess. It is gratifying to know that a Memorial to the departed sister has been set on foot, in the form of a Rectory for St. Mary's.

It is again necessary to postpone the promised continuation of the Rehoboth family in the line of STEPHEN. It is hoped that room will be found for it in the next number.

Extensive contributions to the genealogy of the descendants of JOHN, of Providence, have been received from Mr. D. C. Payne, of De Kalb, N. Y., which will furnish valuable material for a history of that prolific branch, as soon as it can be prepared.

NATHANIEL PAINE, OF REHOBOTH, AND HIS DESCENDANTS.

By GEO. T. PAINE.

Children of Jonathan (4) and Rebecca.

11. JONATHAN, born Feb. 20, 1723-4. Before he was of age, May 15, 1743, he married Sarah, dau. of John Daggett, who was also a minor. Probably she had property, as on March 12, 1744, he was appointed her guardian. Nov. 17, 1746, he was appointed guardian of his brother Joseph, in place of his mother, who died. April 2, 1751, he became guardian also of his brother Samuel, in place of Peter Hunt. Jonathan served in the war of the Revolution, and died at Rehoboth early in 1781. His widow, Sarah, was appointed administratrix on the estate, but died in the winter of 1783-4.

Their children were:

12. NATHANIEL, born 1725-6, and died young. Is not named among the other children in the probate Records.

13. NOAH, born Aug. 12, 1726. Was living in 1740, when he was placed under guardianship of Samuel Mason. He sold his interest in his father's estate to his brother Jonathan, and disappears from view. I cannot trace him further.

14. DARIUS, born Sept. 6, and bap. Oct. 26, 1729. He was living at the death of his father, and on Dec. 10, 1744, was placed under guardianship of Thomas Peck. He seems to have drifted to Stafford, Conn., and while there, Oct. 5, 1751, sells to Ephraim Hunt his share of his father's estate and also his part of his brother David's share. Mr. Hunt had previously purchased from Jonathan Paine (11) his own property, as well as that which he, Jonathan, had bought of Noah (13).

15. DAVID, born April 17, 1733. Peter Hunt was appointed his guardian, Nov. 11, 1745. Darius records that he was dead in 1751; but a David Paine, of Rehoboth, served 8 months in the Revolutionary war, in John Perry's Co. See 29, below.

16. SAMUEL, born June 21, and bap. July 13, 1734. Was placed under guardianship of Peter Hunt, Nov. 11, 1745, but transferred, April 2, 1751, to his brother Jonathan. No further record.

17. JOSEPH, born Nov. 19, and bap. Dec. 4, 1737. At his father's death, 1745, he was left in charge of his mother, but in 1746, Nov. 17, she being dead, he was placed under guardianship of his brother Jonathan. He died in the winter of 1759-60, probably unmarried.

Third Generation.

Children of Nathaniel (9).

Since the publication of the previous number of the Records, it has been ascertained that the name of Nathaniel's wife was Mary. From the Rehoboth town records has been obtained, also, a more complete list of his children than was given on page 80, as follows: No John in the registry.

23. ABIGAIL, b. May 21, 1779; mar. — Kent.

[The record of John (10)—second generation—as given on page 80, requires amendment. Rehoboth records note the marriage of John and Sarah Paine, 1751, and birth of a son, JOHN. As, however, in the father's will, 1778, the estate was left to his brother Nathaniel (9), it is probable that both wife and child were dead.]

But little material being on hand for a continuation of this genealogy in the line of 36 Daniel (IV.)—eighth child of Samuel (III.) and Anne Peck—and additional information having been received in relation to the descendants of Seth (IV.), the records of that line, intermitted at p. 132, vol. 1, will now be resumed.

The following letter from 13 Seth (V.), to his son, 57 Elijah, then a sophomore in Harvard College.

Addressed, "Mr. Elijah Paine, Cambridge."

Son Elijah,

I shall expect you home in about a month. Shall be glad if you will bring me an account of the price of Rie, Rieflour, and Wheat flour, when you leave Cambridge, and what the price will likely be about the 8th or 10th of August, for I must carry a load Down to raise 40 or 50 Dollars, if it will fetch anything.

I have seen Mr. Prescott several times—think he is a Sensible, Prudent, promising young man—he has but very few scholars, nor is he likely to have many until October. I am your Father, Pomfret, June 16, 1783.

SETH PAINE.

Seth Paine was one of the men who had hold of the rope when Gen. Putnam entered the Wolf's den in Pomfret. This on the authority of Mrs. Sarah (Porter) Paine, the accomplished wife of Judge (57) Elijah (VI).

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH OF (91) HON. ELIJAH PAINE, JR.

91. Judge Paine, the second son of (57) Hon. Elijah and Sarah (Porter) Paine, was born April 10, 1796, in Williamstown, Vt.; graduated at Harvard University in 1814, and received the degree of A. M. in 1818. His education in the profession of law was thorough and was mostly obtained in the office of Hon. Daniel Cady, of Johnstown, N. Y., at the law school in Litchfield, Conn., and in the office of H. D. and R. Sedgwick in New York, where the whole of his professional life was spent. Soon after his admission to the Bar he became associated in business with Henry Wheaton, Esq., of New York, the distinguished author of the "Law of Nations," &c., and was largely concerned in the "Reports of the United States Supreme Court," which bear Mr. Wheaton's name. He was the author of "Paine's United States Circuit Court Reports," and in 1830, in connection with Hon. John Duer, LL. D., published "Paine and Duer's Practice in Civil Actions and Proceedings at Law in the State of New York." In 1850 he was elected a Judge of the Superior Court of New York, which office he held at the time of his death. While occupying a seat on the bench, there came before him for decision the well known "Lemon" case, involving the title to eight slaves, in which he illustrated by an elaborate and erudite citation of authorities and fundamental principles, the constitutionality and applicability of the statute of New York, which liberates the slave when brought by the owner, under special circumstances, within the precincts of the State. This decision was as conscientious as it was remarkable for its variance with the general public in regard to the statute, and a decree in favor of the owner would have been generally approved at the North. Judge Paine, feeling that the case was a hard one for the owner of the slaves, had no sooner disposed of the claim, than he headed a subscription, by which the owner was reimbursed the full value of the property which he had in ignorance forfeited to the law. He did not allow his political opinions to interfere with the administration of justice or the friendly relations of social life. In his social habits he avoided the gay, fashionable, or idle amusements that prevail in Society. He enjoyed cheerful and intellectual conversation, and found his happiness in his daily avocations, in his family, or in the contemplation of whatever is beautiful or grand in nature, or in art.

He was a devout Christian, and conversant with the Bible from early youth. He was deeply imbued with the orthodoxy which inculcates the Divinity of Christ, and said he "would willingly die in defence of Christianity." "He had no fear of death, and was perfectly resigned to the will of God, either to live or die," an important testimony to the advantages of a well disciplined faith and of a pure conscience.

In height Judge Paine was over six feet, and of well balanced physical proportions, that did credit to the Green Mountains of his native state. On the 25th of November, 1834, he married Frances Louisa Tileston, of New York, a lady of much talent and many accomplishments, who died March 9, 1845. The death of Judge Paine occurred Oct. 6, 1853, and the strongest demonstrations of respect were paid to his memory, not only by members of the profession of which he was so great an ornament, but by multitudes in every rank of life. The members of the Bar of New York held a meeting under the chairmanship of Chief Justice Oakley, at which the following testimony to his character was adopted, "Resolved, That by the death of Judge Paine the Bar and the community have been deprived of a pure and upright Judge, a man of extensive learning, entire independence, mature judgment, and who faithfully performed the responsible duties of his station."

EASTHAM PEDIGREE.

In consequence of the unfortunate and unaccountable loss of the manuscript copy of the Eastham Genealogy intended for this number, the continuation of that family is necessarily delayed to the next issue, when it will, undoubtedly, be resumed.

THE IPSWICH PAINES.

The volume relating to the history of this family, published some months ago by one of the most zealous and industrious contributors to this magazine, ALBERT W. PAINE, Esq., of Bangor, and noticed on page 97 of the Records, has been favorably noticed by the press in a number of instances. The Boston Daily Advertiser recently contained an extended analysis and criticism of the work, with some additional notice of the author that was modestly omitted from the book itself. The writer refers to him as "one of the leading members of the Bar of Maine, who, although never a member of the Legislature, has had much to do with the legislation of the State, especially in the procurement of the act, making parties accused of crime, legal witness in court, in their own defence."

The Independent, also, while in a lengthy article commending the object and execution of the work, and especially referring to the important part taken by one of their family, Robert Paine, at Salem, in checking the witchcraft delusion, and other facts illustrating the valuable services of the founders of the family in developing the industries and directing the affairs of the New England colonies, attempts to controvert, or at least to throw doubt upon the conclusions suggested by the author as to the remote origin of the Paine race and the relations of the earliest historical characters of the name with its modern representatives. These are questions that, no doubt, will still admit of some discussion, but the inferences drawn by Mr. Paine seem to be very reasonable and satisfactory.

661. JOHN ALSOP, b. at Newark, N. J., January 14, 1840. (Chap. XLIV.)

John Alsop Paine (188) was a physician. Previous to the age of nineteen years he resided with his father on a farm in the town of Deerfield (Marcy), Oneida Co., N. Y. Having been advised that a change of occupation was necessary, on account of an injury of the knee, he selected the profession of medicine for his life's pursuit. Having in view a thorough preparation for the study of medicine he removed to Clinton, N. Y., where he resided two years in the family of his uncle, Rev. Wm. R. Weeks, D. D. (190), while acquiring an academical education. He then pursued the study of medicine under the supervision of the late Dr. Seth Hastings (662), of Clinton, and was graduated from the medical department of Yale College in 1825.

He began the practice of medicine at Volney, Oswego Co., N. Y., and subsequently resided in the following places: One year at Volney, 1826; three years at Paris, 1829; two years at Utica, 1831; ten years at Newark, N. J., 1841; two years at New Hartford, N. Y., 1843; three years at Newark, N. J., 1846; six years at Albany, N. Y., 1852; eight years at New Hartford, 1860; five years at Utica, 1865; five years at Newark, N. J., 1870; and one year at Lake Forest, Ill.

He removed from Volney to Paris, from Paris to Utica, from Utica to Newark at the request of his uncle, to whom he was warmly attached, the bond of union being a desire to aid in maintaining in their integrity and force the doctrines of Calvinism.

As a physician he possessed many desirable mental qualities. His influence over his patients was very positive, controlling them by strong magnetic power, which was accompanied by great urbanity and gentleness of manner. He evinced decided originality of method and acuteness of perception in determining the latent and active causes of disease, and in the proper adaptation and application of remedies. He practiced the so-called allopathic system prior to 1843, and the homœopathic from that year to the close of his life.

He possessed great individuality and self-reliance. His opinions regarding practical matters of every-day life were formed after mature deliberation and the exercise of sound judgment, hence the conclusions he arrived at were usually correct. His mental characteristics indicated strength of purpose, depth of thought, unusual argumentative power and facility in logical and inductive reasoning. He was never more happy than when maintaining an argument on some abstruse subject.

He was for many years an elder in the Presbyterian church, and an officer in each of the Congregational churches with which he was connected. He was a life-member of eight or nine of the principal foreign and home missionary societies. He was elected three successive terms, 1838-1841, to the Presidency of the Essex County Medical Society; he became a member of the American Institute of Homœopathy at its organization in 1844; was made a Fellow and Corresponding Member of the Homœopathic Medical College of Pa., in 1853; was present and joined the Oneida County Homœopathic Medical Society at its first meeting in 1857, and became its President in 1858. He died suddenly, at early dawn, of disease of the heart, while engaged in the performance of professional duties.

Mrs. Amanda Kellogg Paine (656) was the fourth child of Jacob Kellogg, (657) and Catharine Steel (663), named after her aunt Amanda Deming (664). She removed with her father's family from West Hartford, Conn., to New Hartford, N. Y., in the spring of 1812. She was, all her life, a rigid observer of the Sabbath; for many years reckoning from sundown Saturday to sundown Sunday evening, always laying aside every form of occupation except those of necessity, and devoting the day to attendance on public worship, to careful study of the Bible, or to the perusal of religious books.

END OF THE GENEALOGY OF THE SOUTHOLD BRANCH OF THE PAINE FAMILY.

The brief sketches of personal and family history which have been published in the Records, from time to time, for upwards of two years, are now completed. The work could not have been accomplished except through the active co-operation of one or more of the members of nearly every family having living representatives at the present time, to whom the compiler of these sketches feels under great obligations. The result of this labor, performed by many willing colleagues, is the collection of a sufficient number of items of personal history to fill nearly one hundred printed pages. This history, of necessity in many parts fragmentary, and having numerous imperfections, nevertheless is of great interest and value to our family, in being the first of the kind ever compiled, and in having collected and woven into a connected, and, for the most part, accurate record, a large amount of genealogical data, which presumably, would otherwise have never been rescued from oblivion.

It is my purpose, if health and strength permit, at a period not very remote, to re-issue the whole work in book form. The book will probably number not less than three hundred pages, will contain many additions, and will be embellished with several likenesses of representative members of the family.

63. ADDITIONS TO THE BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH of HON. ELIJAH PAINE (VI). See vol. 1, page 113.

Judge Paine served the church in the office of Deacon for thirty years, and educated three sons to the Gospel ministry, viz.: Rev. Elijah Paine, of West Boylston, Rev. William Pomeroy Paine, of Holden, and Rev. John Chester Paine, of Rehoboth. The following estimate of his character is copied from one of the numerous obituary notices published in the papers of the day.

He had great decision and energy of character, and what he did, he did promptly, systematically, and thoroughly. He had an unusual share of practical wisdom, and was politic without artifice, and destitute of duplicity, and scorned the covert design. When necessary, he could keep his own counsels, and yet with his friends he evinced a warmth and geniality of spirit, and was free, communicative and affable. In disposition he was hopeful, and usually cheerful and animated; inflexibly upright in conduct, a stable member of society, and could be depended upon in difficult emergencies.

As a Deacon of the Congregational church, he contributed of his substance to the various benevolent enterprises of the times, as the Lord had prospered him, and was an uncompromising opposer to encroachments of the slave-power of the South, on the privileges of the North.

In his religious sentiments he was thoroughly Calvinistic, and was a discriminating judge of pulpit discourses, and while he earnestly maintained the rights of individual churches and members, he had great respect for the privileges of pastors, and felt the indulgence which ought to be granted them as preachers of truths unwelcome to the selfish heart. In all his intercourse he was pre-eminently the Christian gentleman, and the fragrance of his name is sweet.

63. Children of Hon. Elijah (VI.) and Martha Pomeroy, all born in Ashfield, Mass.
339. LOUISA (VII), born Nov., 1795, and died unmarried 1872, in Holden, Mass.

340. ELIJAH (VII), born Dec., 1797, and graduated at Amherst College, Mass., in the class of 1823, being the valedictorian that year. He became a Congregational clergyman, and settled first in Clermont, N. H., and afterwards in West Boylston, Mass. He married Olive Graves, who died in the spring of 1879, and her husband died in 1836 in West Boylston, at the age of 38. They had four children, three of whom died in infancy, and the surviving daughter,
- 341 AMELIA (VIII), married John Warner, of Northampton, and had four children.
342. HENRY (VII), born March 20, 1799, and married Mary Fay. They had no children. He died 1867, in Ashfield. His wife married 2d Mr. Pierce, and was living in Ashfield, 1881.
343. WILLIAM POMEROY (VII), born August 1, 1802, and graduated from Amherst College in 1827, with the Philosophical Oration.

The first year after his graduation he taught in Amherst Academy. The next two years he spent in the study of Theology, entering on his tutorship in 1829, which he continued until 1831; he returned to Andover and completed his Theological course in 1832, when he was licensed to preach by the Suffolk Association in Boston; October 24, 1833, he was ordained and installed pastor of the Congregational church in Holden, Mass., from which he was never dismissed, being pastor at the time of his death, forty-three years later. In 1854 he was elected a trustee of Amherst College, which office he also held until his death. In 1856 the College conferred upon him the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity.

Dr. Paine stated at the fortieth anniversary of his settlement in Holden, that during that time he had preached 4,000 sermons, attended 348 weddings, and more than 1,000 funerals; administered the sacrament 240 times, and officiated as chairman of the School Committee of the town 34 years. Of the 450 members of this church in 1833 not more than 25 were living in 1873. The natural endowments of Dr. Paine were very good—more solid than brilliant: more practical than speculative; preaching with the fervency and persuasion of an earnest worker in the cause of his Divine Master; aiming to train men to live as they ought in this world, and to promote the highest welfare of his people, by which he secured their confidence and endeared himself to the whole community where his memory will live in the traditions of the town and of the church.

In April, 1875, when physical disabilities and the infirmities of age overtook him, he offered his resignation, but his people resolved that by his faithful labors, his judicious counsel and his kind and genial manners, he was entitled to their warmest gratitude and love, and they so far accepted his resignation as to release him from all responsibility, and, that he remain Pastor emeritus; thus making his last days happy by their acts of kindness and attention.

His last illness was long and attended with constant bodily suffering, but firm in faith, cheerful in hope of a blessed immortality, he passed peacefully away on the 28th of November, 1876, in the 75th year of his age.

On the 11th of June, 1834, he married Sarah, daughter of John and Sarah Mack, of Plainfield, Mass., who was born December 18, 1810, and died Oct. 3, 1868, in Holden.

In the places where he was settled, he was Chairman of the School Committee during many years.

Oct. 17, 1863, Mr. Paine received from Gov. John A. Andrew a commission as Chaplain of 21st Regiment Mass. Volunteers, but owing to delicate health, he was soon obliged to resign it.

He was married April 25, 1839, to Eliza Folger, of Nantucket, who was born Oct. 11, 1818, daughter of Gideon and Eunice (Macy) Folger, who was a descendant of Walter 6, Barzillai 5, Nathan 4, Eleazer 3, Peter 2, one of the original settlers of Nantucket, and the grandfather of Benjamin Franklin. Peter 2 was the son of John Folger 1st, who came from England and died at Martha's Vineyard, about 1660.

Eunice Macy was the daughter of Silvanus Macy, who was the son of Caleb, the son of Richard, the son of John, the son of Thomas Macy, also one of the thirteen original settlers of Nantucket. The circumstances which led Thomas Macy to make his home in Nantucket, are celebrated by Whittier in the ballad of "The Exiles."

 WORCESTER BRANCH—ERRATA.

In the first volume of the Paine Family Records, "one of the advantages of the method of publication adopted," is stated to be the opportunity to make timely correction of any errors which may have occurred in preparing the genealogical collections. The compiler of the Worcester Branch wishes to avail himself of this advantage and correct some errors of the press, as also others made by reason of too much reliance paid to statements of previous writers. He must admit also that one or two of these errors arose from his own negligence, but the importance of having the dates and names mentioned in this record as correct as possible, requires him to note the following errata:

In Vol. I page 39. DOROTHY is given as the second child of Nathaniel and Sarah Clark Paine, while the dates given show that she was the fourth. The date of her marriage should have been stated as March 5, 1741, not 1746.

Page 56, Caroline Burling. The first child of Hannah Paine and Ebenezer Bradish, married James Brazer, by whom she had one son, James Brazer, Jr., born July 26, 1823, and not by her marriage with William Kinnicut as the printer states. On the same page, JOHN PAINE, eighth child of Timothy and Sarah Clark Paine, is stated as having died in 1809, it should be 1832. At bottom of same page it is said that James Perkins, son of James and Eliza Callahan Perkins died unmarried. He was married and his wife survived him.

Page 57, first line. Sarah Paine Perkins should read Eliza Callahan Perkins, who married the Rt. Rev. Bishop Doane of New Jersey. Of the two sons of this marriage, William Crosswell Doane, D.D., is P. E. Bishop of Albany, N. Y., and George H. is Vicar Gen. of the R. C. Diocese of Newark, N. J.

Page 8, 10th line. Annie Cushing Sturgis Paine, dau. of Frederick Wm. Paine, died at Brookline, Mass., Nov. 19, 1873—not in Worcester.

Y., about 1748, and was one of the most active in founding the church in that place. He was a Separatist, but appears not to have been so zealous as his younger brothers. But little relating to his life subsequently is known. The children of ABRAHAM and REBECCA Paine were, according to the Canterbury records:

43.

ELISHA PAINE, son of Elisha and Rebecca Paine, of Canterbury, Conn., was born in Eastham, Mass., Dec. 29, 1693, and went with other members of his father's family to the territory now known as Canterbury, Conn., in or about the year 1700. He at an early age showed a fondness for study and a thirst for knowledge. Choosing the profession of a lawyer, he prepared himself for practice, and rose to distinction; and in his time was considered "one of the greatest in Connecticut." Becoming deeply interested in religious matters, and believing "it was his duty to preach the gospel," he abandoned the law, and in December, 1742, offered himself for examination before some ministers of that colony, among whom were Revs. Joseph Meacham, Samuel Moosely, Ebenezar Wheelock and Benjamin Pomeroy, who were satisfied as to his preparation for the ministry, and "his Christian life and conversation, advised him to apply to the Committee of the Association" for a license to preach. The Committee failing to meet at the time appointed to grant it, on the account "of badness of the weather and necessary business," he made no further attempt to obtain a license, but at once commenced his labors as an itinerant. He was arrested at Woodstock, in February, 1743, for preaching without license at the house of Mr. John Morse, and carried before Col. Chandler, the justice, who issued the warrant for his arrest, who required him to give bonds to obey the law regarding preaching without a license. He refused to give bonds and was committed "to the dirtiest prison," he says, he "ever saw, and was compelled to beg a broom to sweep a place to walk in." Here he passed his time until May 13, when, by order of Court, he was released, it having been found that he was unlawfully incarcerated. While here many persons visited him, and persuaded him "to give bail as the warrant required, and a few offered to become bound for him, but to comply with the warrant his "conscience" forbade him. The imprisonment did not in the least abate his zeal or deter him from proceeding on his tour. He visited Grafton, Upton and Shrewsbury, preaching with acceptance, and returning to his family, May 28, having been absent three months. In July following he set out for another preaching tour, visiting Providence, Bristol, Boston, Cambridge, Lancaster and other towns, returning in December, having, during his absence, preached two hundred and forty-four sermons. In the summer of 1744, having a desire to again see the dear old home of his childhood where many of his near relatives yet were residing, he visited Eastham and many other of the Cape towns. In a letter to his "wife and children," dated at Chatham, July 3, 1744, it would appear that his labors were attended with great success in that vicinity and in Harwich. He writes: "I am proposing every day to come home, but dare not leave the Lord's harvest, lest the wild beasts devour, and the wild boars should root up what the Lord seems to be doing here with the greatest power that I ever saw, here or I think, anywhere. The Lord is doing wonders in this sandy land. * * * The pine woods in Harwich ring hallelujahs and hosannas, even from babes. I never heard the like before from little ones from six years old and upwards." He further writes: "Our relations, the most of them, stand at a distance. Cousin Ebenezer Paine and his family seem exceedingly opposite, except one daughter." At Harwich, it is well-known, his labors resulted in the organization of a Separate Church, in 1749, which, a few years afterward, became a Baptist church.

Soon after his return from the Cape he was arrested for having, in the month of April preceding his visit, preached at the house of Benjamin Cleaveland, in Windham, "both as to doctrine and practice, to a great number of people then present that were notified many days before," in violation of the law of the Colony, enacted in 1742, prohibiting any but settled or ordained ministers from public teaching. At the Court, Sept. 22, 1744, Mr. Paine claimed that the "facts complained of" were "unwarranted by the laws of God and the King, therefore not liable by any court, or law, inferior thereto;" but the Justice saw proper to require of him bonds to "not again offend in the like kind" before "the sitting of the County Court in December" following. He flatly refused to comply and was incarcerated. He humbly submitted to the hardships of prison life, declaring if he went "from prison to paradise" it would "be as sweet as if he went from a throne." His conduct in prison was such that his persecutors became alarmed, and in a few days he was released. With zeal unabated, he continued in the work he had begun, and within a short period the Windham County churches felt the effects of his labors. The church in his own town of Canterbury, with which he united after his conversion in 1721, became schismatical, and the most influential part followed him into the Separate movement, and a church established, over which his brother Solomon was ordained, Sept. 10, 1746. Mr. Paine, after many years' labor in Connecticut, as an itinerant, endeavoring to produce a change in that colony in religious opinions, to secure the independency of the church, which the articles of ecclesiastical discipline, known as the Saybrook Platform, were not favorable to, became a leader of a flock at Bridgehampton, L. I., where he was settled in May, 1752. His death occurred Aug. 26, 1775, in the eighty-third year of his age, having preached to his beloved flock within fifteen days of his death. He was a man of great power, zeal and energy. His unwavering course, skill in reasoning, and depth of knowledge, gave him great influence among the people of his sect.

Much relating to the life of Elisha Paine, the Separatist leader, is found in the Church History by Rev. Isaac Backus, and in Miss Larned's History of Windham Co., Conn.

Mr. Paine married in Canterbury, Nov. 24, 1720, Mary Johnson, and had ten children, it is understood. The Canterbury records give the following, five with dates of their births, as the children of ELISHA and MARY PAINE:

190. I. MARY, born April 12, 1723.
191. II. JAMES, born June 2, 1725; died June 5, 1729.

MARY PAINE, daughter of Elisha and Rebecca of Canterbury, Conn., married Robert Freeman, April 5, 1722. They removed to Promfret, Conn., where he died Sept. 25, 1755. Mary, the widow, it is understood, married second, Deacon Waldo, of Norwich. Mr. Freeman was a man of great piety. The children of MARY PAINE who married ROBERT FREEMAN:

197. I. ELIJAH, born Jan. 6, 1722-3, in Truro; died aged 25.

45.

SOLOMON PAINE, son of Elisha and Rebecca Paine, of Canterbury, Conn., was born in Eastham, Mass., May 16, 1698. His father at that time was living in what was then known as "Little Skaket Neck." He went with the family to Canterbury. He was converted in 1721, and united with the First Church in that place that year. In 1741 he became deeply interested in the great religious movement in Windham County, and took a prominent part therein, in and about Canterbury. He was one of the leaders of the faction in Canterbury that opposed the settlement of Mr. Cogswell. Upon the organization of the Separate Church in that place, he accepted the call to become the pastor, and was ordained Sept. 10, 1746. His ministry was very satisfactory; and "after twelve days' sickness he fell asleep in the Lord, Oct. 25, 1754," in the 57th year of his age, and in the thirteenth year of his ministry. He was a "faithful pastor," and was held in high esteem by all the Separate preachers of his time. He was equally as determined and unyielding as his brother, Elisha, but not so able a preacher. He published "A short view of the Constitution of the Church of Christ, and the difference between it and the Church established in Connecticut." Copies of this work are indeed scarce. Those who desire to know much of Mr. Paine's religious life should consult Larned's History of Windham Co., Conn. He was twice married. His first wife was Sarah C... er, to whom he was married March 2, 1720. She died Aug. 9, 1731. His second wife was Priscilla Fitch, to whom he was married May 31, 1732. She died May 6, 1782, aged 82 years. Rev. Solomon Paine was buried in Canterbury, Conn., and a stone marks the spot with inscription.

JOHN PAINE, the youngest son of Elisha and Rebecca Paine, of Canterbury, was born in that town in July, 1707. He united with the Canterbury Church in 1731. He took part with the Separates, and finally became pastor of the Separate Church formed in that part of Rehoboth, now included in the town of Seekonk, R. I. He was ordained August 3, 1748. Mr. John Greenwood was then the pastor of the First Church, and strongly opposed the ordination. He sent a letter to the Separate Council convened to ordain Mr. Paine, which was very pointedly answered by Mr. Elisha Paine in a letter under date, August 10, 1748. Mr. John Paine was a member of the Council convened at Harwich, in 1749, to ordain

Joshua Nickerson, pastor of the Separate Church, and gave the right hand of fellowship. This year, with the Separates, or Newlights, he petitioned the Provincial Legislature of Massachusetts to forbid "ye execution of ecclesiastical laws," and to allow no distinction between any class of Christians in supporting public worship. He and Samuel Peck took lead in the matter, but were unsuccessful. He was a rigid disciplinarian; and it was not long before many of the members who assented to his ordination became turbulent, and refused to allow him to enter their houses "to administer." In consequence, a council was convened at Rehoboth, May 8, 1751, and, after considering the whole matter, "it was declared that John Paine, pastor, had fulfilled his pastoral charge over this church, until all the brethren he was ordained over had fallen by transgressions out of the church, and had shut all their doors against his administering in their houses, so that he is dismissed from his relation to them; and we give him the right hand of fellowship as a faithful minister of Christ, and to minister wherever God shall call him." What became of him after this period we have been, as yet, unable to learn. Any person having any information, respecting him or his descendants, will confer a favor by giving it to the compiler. He married Sarah Church, of Canterbury, Feb. 12, 1730. Their children were, as far as is known:

220. I. SARAH, born in Canterbury, Nov. 6, 1730.

221. II. SYBIL, born in Canterbury, Jan. 18, 1734-5.

51.

JOHN PAINE, JR., son of Deacon John and Bennet Paine, of Eastham, was a resident of Eastham, and a householder early as 1714. From memoranda in possession of C. C. Paine, Esq., Troy, Pa., we learn that he was three times married, and died in November, 1771. There appears no record of his first marriage, which must have been about 1713. His second wife was doubtless Thankful Linnell, as the Eastham records show she married John Paine, Dec. 3, 1743. His third and last wife was undoubtedly Mrs. Mary Treat, as she married John Paine, Nov. 28, 1754. She was probably widow of Mr. Joshua Treat, a son of the Rev. Samuel Treat. The Probate Records show nothing respecting the settlement of his estate, nor do the records of Eastham show anything respecting his family. His father in his journal thus alludes to him: "This day, being the 14th day of March, 1711-12, I have taken some steps towards the promoting of that which may have great influence into the comfort or discomfort of my son, John, being a matter of as great concern to his outward state in the world as any he is like to be concerned in." From the records of Eastham, we learn he had land several times granted him. Under date of Aug. 20, 1711, John Paine, Jr., had a parcel of land granted him at the north end of Sheep Pond, so called, between the highway and Cedar Swamp. He had a "tenement lot" at the head of Namskaket granted him, Sept. 22, 1711, and a lot to set his house upon, Sept. 12, 1713. The land granted him was out of the common land, and to which he had a right. The land, laid out by the town for a burial place, March 23, 1719-20, which is now a part of the Orleans Cemetery, was between his land and the Meeting house.

If it can be shown that Samuel Paine, *, who died at Eastham, in the spring of 1784, was the son of John Paine, Jr., then the following were John's children:

222. I. ELIZABETH, married — Sparrow.
223. II. MARY, married Warren Green, March 13, 1733-4.
224. III. BENNET, married Abial Crosby, Nov. 5, 1763.
225. IV. NATHANIEL, married Thankful Young, April 20, 1753.
226. V. SAMUEL, married Mary Gould, of Harwich, Mar. 25, 1762; died 1784.

* The Probate Records at Barnstable show that SAMUEL PAINE, of Eastham, made his will Jan. 19, 1784, and that it was presented for Probate May 4, 1784. The will mentions wife Mary, brother Nathaniel, who had heirs: sisters Eliz. Sparrow, Bennet Crosby, and "Sister Green." This will mentions no children of his own. If this Samuel Paine was not a son of JOHN PAINE, JR., who was he? He must have been born about the year 1720. BENNET CROSBY was doubtless named for John Paine, Jr.'s mother, who was BENNET FREEMAN.

53.

WILLIAM PAINE, son of Dea. John and Bennet Paine, of Eastham, was a man of note in that town. He was a Representative to the Provincial Legislature from Eastham in 1731, 1732, 1735, 1738, 1739, 1740, 1743 and in 1744. He was one of His Majesty's Justices, receiving his appointment in 1738. He was much employed by the town to settle important and difficult matters. In 1740, he was allowed to take porpoises with nets, and became engaged in the business, employing considerable number of men. But from what can be learned it did not prove to him a lucrative business. He became interested in the movements for the capture of Louisbourg, the stronghold of the French at Cape Breton, and, after the capture, succeeded his brother Theophilus to the Lieutenancy of Capt. Elisha Doane's Company, and was commissioned by Gov. Shirley, Nov. 4, 1745. This Company was in Col. Shubael Gorham's Seventh Massachusetts Regiment, and had seen much hard service. Lieut. Paine died at that place in August or September, 1746, at the age of 51. His brother Theophilus took out letters to settle his estate, Jan. 20, 1746-7. The estate was appraised by Dea. John Freeman, Jonathan Higgins, Jr., and Amos Knowles, March 10, 1746-7. He was in possession of considerable property at the time of his death, but it was found necessary to pay only "two shillings and nine pence on ye pound" to the creditors. The administrator charged thirteen pounds and ten shillings "cash for freight and charge of his goods from Louisbourg." How he became so deeply involved in debt is not now known.

He was twice married. His first wife was Sarah Bacon, of Barnstable, to whom he was intended Sept. 2, 1727. She was daughter of Nathaniel Bacon, of Barnstable. She died at Eastham, and lies buried in the Orleans cemetery, where a slate stone marks the spot with this inscription:

HERE LIES THE BODY OF MRS. SARAH PAINE,
THE WIFE OF WILLIAM PAINE, ESQ.,
DIED JANUARY YE 16, 1743-4

His second wife was widow Elizabeth Myrick, to whom he was married January 14, 1744-5. She was a daughter of Mr. Samuel Osborn, who had long been pastor of the South Church, in Eastham, and sister of Dr. John Osborn, the distinguished physician and poetical writer, of Middletown, Conn. Widow Myrick's first husband (William Myrick, to whom she was married January 23, 1733-4.) was lost at sea, leaving her with a son, William Myrick. By her second husband, WILLIAM PAINE, ESQ., she had one son, whom she named William Paine for his father, who was then dead. This son was a distinguished school teacher, and father of John Howard Paine, who wrote "Home Sweet Home." Widow Elizabeth Paine married Nov. 10, 1749, Edmund Doane, and they removed to Barrington, Nova Scotia, where they were residing during the Revolutionary war, and where it is probable she died. Upon her removal, she left her two sons, each named William, in Eastham. The former married, and the latter a lad with Rev. Joseph Crocker, who had undertaken to educate him.

Children of WILLIAM PAINE, ESQ., by wife SARAH, as far as known :

- 227 I. SARAH, born in Barnstable, Sept. 17, 1728; married Thomas Sturges, of Barnstable, January 24, 1744-5.
- 228 II. RUTH, born March 23, 1730; died Sept. 21, 1736.
229. III. JOSIAH, born June 20, 1732.
230. IV. JEDIDA, born May 13, 1734

By wife ELIZABETH :

- 231 V. WILLIAM, born — 1746; married first Lucy Taylor, Nov. 14, 1775; second Sarah Isaacs, Dec., 1780; died at New York, March 12, 1812, aged 66.

BENJAMIN PAINE, son of John and Bennet Paine, of Eastham, died young. His death is thus noticed in his father's journal: "On the fifteenth day of Dec., 1713, my son, Benjamin, departed this life; who on the eighth day of the same month, being at sea on a whaling design, the boat in which he was, was staved to pieces by a whale, and he thrown into the water and wounded in his body, which, with the cold of the water and weather, set him into a grievous fever, which, co-operating with his bodily hurt, were the means of his death. He was a lovely child, both in life and death. The last words almost which he uttered were: 'Lord Jesus, receive my soul.'"

58.

THEOPHILUS PAINE, son of John and Bennet Paine, of Eastham, married Hannah Bacon, and settled in Eastham, in that part now Orleans. He was at the siege of Louisbourg. He was Lieutenant of the Company commanded by Capt. Elisha Doane, of the same town, and was commissioned by Gov. Shirley, Feb. 20, 1744-5. This Company was in the Seventh Massachusetts Regiment, commanded by Col. Shubael Gorham, of Barnstable, which was one of the most efficient regiments in the service. After the reduction of the fortress, he returned to Eastham, and was succeeded by his brother, William, as Lieutenant. He died in 1755, and letters were granted his wife, Hannah, to settle his estate, Sept. 2, 1755. The children of Theophilus Paine are not fully shown by the Eastham records. The following list is made up from the records at Orleans, and at the Probate office in Barnstable.

Children of LT. THEOPHILUS and HANNAH PAINE, of Eastham :

232. I. RUTH, born Feb. 3, 1737-8; probably married Samuel Pierce, Feb. 8, 1757.
233. II. NATHANIEL, born Feb. 3, 1737-8; probably married Phebe Mayo, Nov. 17, 1757.
234. III. JOHN, born July 20, 1739.

THOMAS PAINE, ESQ., son of Dea. John Paine, of Eastham, by his second wife, Alice, was a prominent man in Eastham. He was among the foremost in that patriotic town to resent the encroachments of British Parliament upon the liberties of the colonies. He was one of the nine who reported the series of patriotic resolves adopted by Eastham in town meeting, Feb. 24, 1773, and one of the foremost in the movement at Barnstable, in 1774, to stop the opening of the Court; also the same year, one of the Committee who reported the resolves in the regard to their duties as to the use and sale of tea, and one of the Committee of correspondence for the County, appointed that year. He was a Representative in 1767, 1770, 1780 and in 1781. He was a Justice of the Peace, receiving his first commission in 1776. He was engaged in trade in Eastham many years, occupying the place afterwards occupied by Timothy Bascom, but more recently by the wife of the late John H. Higgins. The war proved disastrous to his business, and he lost most of his property. He removed to Boston about 1781, and in 1783 went to Mt. Desert, Me., where he resided several years. He died at the house of his son, Josiah, in Portland, Me., January 22, 1802, in the 77th year of his age. Mr. Paine "was a man of considerable literary taste, and was at times a correspondent of Hon. Robert

T. Paine, LL.D.," William Payne (the father of John Howard Payne) his kinsmen, and other distinguished men interested in the movements that resulted in the independence of the Colonies. "His letters to his children," (who became separated after the death of their beloved mother, says his grandson in a letter to the writer), "evinced an ardent interest in their welfare, moral as well as material, and were characterized by sentiments of piety. The following verse was often the beginning of entries in his journal :

'This day be bread and peace my lot,
All else beneath the sun ;
THOU knowest if best bestowed or not,
And let Thy will be done.'

His first wife was Phebe, daughter of Eleazar Freeman, of Eastham, to whom he was married by Rev. Joseph Crocker, January 24, 1758. She died at Eastham, now Orleans, August 14, 1779. She lies buried in the old church yard at that place, where a marble slab, resting upon a brick wall that surrounds her grave, marks the spot with this inscription: "Sacred to the memory of Mrs. Phebe Paine, wife of Thomas Paine, Esqr. She died Augt. 14. A. D. 1779, aged 49 years. In life beloved, in death lamented. The flesh rest here till Jesus comes and claims the treasure from the tomb. This stone is placed here by her bereaved children from motives of affectionate and fillial regard." The wall surrounding her grave was first constructed in 1804, through the agency of her son, Clement Paine, Esq. In 1870, the dilapidated condition of the wall was brought to the notice of her grandson, Chas. C. Paine, Esq., of Troy, Pa., who at once caused the old wall to be removed, and a substantial one of new brick to be erected in its stead, and the slab to be placed in its original position at his own expense.

The second wife of Thomas Paine, Esq., was widow Sarah S. Mason, to whom he was married in 1786, at Eden, Me. She was a native of Martha's Vineyard, it is understood, and born in 1749. She died at Eden, Mt. Desert, Me., in 1817.

Children of THOMAS PAINE, ESQ., by his wife PHEBE :
238. I. JAMES, born in Eastham, Dec. 17, 1759; married Sally Wingate, of Biddeford, Me.

239. II. JOSIAH, born in Eastham, April 8, 1760; married Phebe Stone, Feb. 12, 1793.
240. III. SETH, born in Eastham, Feb. 17, 1762; died Jan. 29, 1765.
241. IV. ENOCH, born in Eastham, Jan. 29, 1764.
242. V. SETH, born in Eastham, June 22, 1766.

245. VIII. PHEBE, born in Eastham, March 23, 1771; married David McDougal, of Buxton, Me., Jan. 29, 1793, and died Feb. 16, 1839.

By wife SARAH S. PAINE :

248. XI. THOMAS, born at Eden, Sept. 22, 1793; married Olive Hadley, Aug. 24, 1819. He died March 25, 1879.

68.

HANNAH PAINE, twin daughter of Dea. John Paine, by his wife, Alice, was never married. She was a school teacher in Eastham, and died between March, 1807, and March, 1808. She furnished her nephews, David and Clement Paine, a short time before her death, much relating to her family history, which has been preserved in writing.

76.

THOMAS PAINE, son of James and Bethiah Paine, of Barnstable, at an early age was placed under Rev. Jonathan Russel, of Barnstable, for preparation for Harvard College. In 1713, he became a student at Harvard, and applied himself to the college studies with great earnestness. He became deeply interested in mathematical and astronomical studies, and pursued them much beyond the college course of that period. His great interest in these branches led him in 1718 and 1719 to publish almanacs in his own name. He calculated the great eclipse of the sun in 1806, which his distinguished son, Hon. R. T. Paine, found to exactly accord with his calculations. To the study of Latin, Greek, Hebrew and French, he gave great attention. He graduated in July, 1717, but with what rank does not appear. Having shown early a predelection for the ministry, in August following he commenced the study of divinity with Rev. Theophilus Barnard, of Andover. After completing his theological studies, he accepted an invitation extended him, and was ordained pastor of the Church at Weymouth, Mass, Aug. 19, 1719. He labored at that place till ill health caused him to ask a dismissal in 1730, which was granted, but he was not formally dismissed from the church till April 15, 1734. After his dismissal in 1730, he went to Boston to reside, and soon became engaged in commercial pursuits. He carried on trade between the southern provinces, West Indies, the new port of Halifax, England and other foreign ports, and soon acquired considerable wealth. He was also engaged in the manufacture of cannons, casting shot, etc. He had foundries in Abington and Bridgewater. In the summer of 1749, just as his son, Robert Treat, had graduated at Harvard, his business affairs became involved in consequence of the capture of some of his vessels, and the disastrous state of the currency and of business, his property was swept away. His health again giving away, he made a voyage to the West Indies, and on his return made Halifax his place of residence. Here he turned his attention to the study of law, with intention to practice. His health becoming greatly impaired, he was compelled to abandon his studies, and he returned to Braintree, Mass., at a place called Germantown, where his daughter, Abigail Greenleaf, resided, and at her house, not long after, passed to his rest, May 30, 1757, aged 63 years, and was buried at Weymouth. He was undoubtedly "a man of great talents, learning, industry, and piety."

His wife was Eunice, youngest daughter of Rev. Samuel Treat, of Eastham, the first settled minister of that town, and grand-daughter of Gov. Robert Treat, of Milford, Conn. Her mother was Abigail Willard, daughter of Rev. Samuel Willard, pastor of the Old South Church in Boston. Mr. Paine was married in Boston, April 21, 1721, and she at the time was but sixteen years of age. She died Oct. 17, 1747, aged 42 years. She was born at Eastham in or about the year 1705.

Children of REV. THOMAS PAINE and EUNICE, his wife :

249. I. ABIGAIL, born March 6, 1725; married Joseph Greenleaf, Oct. 17, 1749; died Jan. 15, 1808, aged 83.

She married for second husband, Edmond Hawes, of Yarmouth, Oct. 11, 1729. He died at Barnstable, May 11, 1762. The time of her death not known to the writer. Her children, by Nathaniel Freeman, were :

OBITUARY. It is with regret that we record the sudden death, since the first part of this issue was printed, of HORATIO PAINE, M. D., a nephew of the late distinguished Prof. Martyn Paine, and Superintendent of the Roosevelt Hospital, New York, ever since the organization of that model institution. He died May 1, 1882, in London, England, where he had gone on account of a peculiar affection of his eyes, which proved to be of a more serious nature than he or his friends had suspected, and connected with a disease of the brain from which he died. See ante page 151, "Woodstock Branch," No. 418.

HUGH DE PAYEN.

By ALBERT W. PAINE, ESQ., of Bangor, Me.

In previous numbers of the RECORDS, on pp. 136-8, and 151-2, of vol. I., a brief history was given of Hugh De Payen, the distinguished crusader, and founder of the order of "Templars of the Cross," which, for so long a time, exercised a powerful control in the affairs of Europe and of the East. The idea was also advanced that presumably he was by blood connected with the ancestral line of the Ipswich branch of the Paine family of the present day. Not that he was a direct ancestor, but that he was the son or descendant of a common father or ancestor of a previous generation. Since the publication of the RECORDS cited, the writer has, in a separate volume, given publicity to the same views, under the title of "Paine Genealogy: Ipswich Branch." This volume has received flattering notice from many quarters, on both sides of the Atlantic, in some of which, however, the accuracy of the above stated presumption is doubted, and in others denied. This denial is by different critics placed on quite different grounds, no two agreeing, except in the very important fact that Hugh was a Norman, or of Norman descent.

A distinguished English critic bases his objection on the fact that he was an Italian by birth, and hence could not have sustained the alleged relationship. Another correspondent asserts the nativity of the party as being in the southeast part of France, while a third denies the fact of his being a "Payne" at all, but simply that he was "Hugh" of the town of Payens, where he was born, that being a town adjacent to Troies, about 90 miles S.E. from Paris. This last criticism is that of the "N. Y. Independent" and the "Literary World."

The discussion is an interesting one, especially to the Paine race, and no more appropriate place for its discussion could be selected than the pages of the RECORDS of that large family. What is the real truth of the matter is and can be the only object of any discussion on the subject, and to that end the following remarks are offered in the hope that others may add new light to the subject.

so that the actual fact may be substantiated. Who then was Hugh De Payen?

At the expense of repeating briefly the argument heretofore adduced in favor of the presumption advanced, it is proper to say that it is based largely, and in one sense, wholly on the coat of arms of the family. The character and meaning of the heraldic sign has already been given, in connection with the subject in the works already referred to, and need not be here repeated. Suffice it to say that this coat of arms is very fully proved and its character substantiated. It was of very early origin, its use in the family going back to at least the year 1400 A. D., which was very soon after coats of arms were adopted in England, or by the Normans there, it being the one known in works of heraldry as "The Arms of Payne of Market Bosworth, County of Leicester and of Suffolk." This coat of arms of the Ipswich family, thus well established as of very ancient date, contained all the distinguishing traits and "virtues," for which Hugh was especially famed. Chief among these was the fact that he was a Crusader, of the rank of Knight, and that he won this honor by his bravery and skill; that he was poor because of his being a younger son, and thus without inheritance; that the ancestor, whose virtues were thus heralded, was of an ancient lineage; and besides that, he was a Templar of the order which Hugh established. All this goes to show that the assumer of this coat of arms was heir to all and the same characteristics which made Hugh famous, and thus that the two parties, if two they were, were of the same name, in the same service or crusade, and won the same glory at the same time and with the same success. And it can hardly be surmised that such illustrious virtues as those of Hugh should have been overlooked by his heirs, when a century or two afterwards, coats of arms were adopted under a system which led the assumer in all cases to take advantage of his ancestors' line of history. Yet, although twenty-six Payne coats of arms are to be found, the one in question alone bears evidence of crusade service or the honor of knighthood. From all these indications, besides others of minor importance, the writer was led to the conclusion that the two characters thus developed were one and the same person.

That Hugh could scarcely have been an Italian by birth, would seem to follow from the circumstance that not until about the middle of the 11th century had the Norman emigration reached Italy, and though it was possible that some advanced immigrant may have had a son early enough to grow up to the age of a crusader of Hugh's character, in the same century, yet it is hardly probable that such was the case. And besides, from what is known of Hugh's subsequent history, to which we shall have occasion to refer, it would seem conclusive that, wherever may have been his birthplace, all his connections and proclivities, so to speak, were those in or near the Norman home. And the same remark may be made of the other supposition that Hugh was born in the south-east corner of France.

Indeed, it would seem that the only real question at issue, is that presented by the "Independent" and "Literary World's" critics, and that is whether Hugh was a Payen at all, or whether the latter term only designates the place of his nativity. That such is the force of the preposition de very frequently, there is no doubt. Nor can there be any doubt that the same preposition was equally used to designate the relation of son to the father of the same surname. The adoption of surnames took place in England and Normandy at about the time of the Conquest, in 1066, and Hugh went to the Crusade, 33 years after that. The probability is very strong that so prominent a man would hardly have lived a long life, at that time, with so common a name as Hugh alone, and especially as surnames were then in fashion, and the name of "Payen" had already then been adopted as such, years before, as is evidenced by Domesday. This is a consideration having some weight.

The criticisms, which we now are considering, assume that Hugh was a citizen of France, and that he was a Knight, or Chevalier, before he went to the Crusades, and that his poverty was because of his vow whereby he renounced "all things for Christ's sake." That there is any direct evidence of his having wealth to thus abandon, we do not understand, but only that his vow "to abandon all things for Christ's sake" may be so construed. While this may be true, yet that vow meant a great deal more than that, while it proved nothing in favor of the party having already anything in the way of wealth to abandon. That he was actually poor in this world's goods is an admitted fact, emblazoned on his shield and on that of his order, as it was on the Paine coat of arms.

both alike. And the same remark may be made of his knighthood or chivalric character. Though chivalry had existed for ages before, yet the chivalry for which such as Hugh were celebrated, was the sole outbirth of that Christian spirit which organized the Crusades and did not really exist until the Crusades brought it out. At the most, they were only contemporaneous, and, from all we know of Hugh's history, it is far more reasonable to infer that his knighthood was the result, rather than the cause, of his Crusade service.

From a careful perusal of the quotations in the two criticisms referred to we are at loss to collect any proof that conflicts with the proposition we originally advanced. Now, was Hugh a "Payne"? From documents favored us by the distinguished scholar and traveler, Prof. Paine, of Tarrytown, N. Y., we are compelled to the conclusion that he was; or at least, that the "Payens" was not a designation of place but of paternity. Thus, "La Noblesse de France aux Croisades," in a long list of names of Frenchmen engaged in the Crusades, gives "Hugues de Pavens, Picardie," which he does on the authority of a reliable author. This would certainly, not merely indicate, but prove that "Payens" was not his place, as his place is given besides, and Picardie is very far away from Payens, which is in the Province of Oude. In another French work of authority on the "Order of the Temple," the author uses this language: "Hugues de Payens, in Latin, Paganis, or Pagano, native of Troies, in Champagne," etc. These Latin words had no relation to place, as they were solely applicable to persons, these words being applied to such, as expressive only of anti-Christian or Pagan proclivity. Besides, while "Payens" is used, the nativity is expressed, not only by the mention of the town, but also the province. There would seem to be no other conclusion to be drawn from this language than that "Payens" was the surname of the person spoken of.

Another question bearing on that of the identity of Hugh with that of the person indicated by the Payne coat of arms, has relation to his residence prior to going to the Crusade. That he was a Norman by descent is not denied. The fact that he was an Englishman by birth has not been asserted, nor does the fact of the alleged identity depend on Hugh being the son of Payen. The latter is an independent fact, having no necessary connection with the former. Pagen, the alleged father, emigrated from Normandy to England in the time of Edward, carrying with him his eldest son Edmond, and died in 1086, or about that time. Whether Hugh, if his son, went with him or not, does not matter. He probably did not, but may have gone to the Eastward, and settled in Troies or Payens. These places were but a very short distance from Normandie, and Piccardie was still nearer; and there is nothing unreasonable in the supposition that, while the father and brother went across the Channel to England, Hugh may have gone to the place named, and there, some 20 years after, joined the Crusade. At all events the fact that he went from Troies, or Piccardie, does not discredit the identity of Hugh with him whose character, as a "Payen," is so exactly delineated on the coat of arms. The right of the English descendants of this Norman family to use the inherited virtues of the line was not restricted by territorial limits or boundaries, and hence the propriety of their use.

Another fact of importance, as bearing on the question of identity, consists of the mission on which Hugh was sent, by King Baldwin II, to France and England for aid from the Christian princes. This fact for these days has an importance, as going to show that he had such relation to the two States as made his appointment proper and effective, and the additional fact that he attended the Council at Payens is wholly unimportant.

Indeed, the writer can see no evidence from the whole history thus far adduced, going even to impeach, much less to contradict, the presumption stated at the commencement of our remarks.

The question, however, is not absolutely settled, and the truth is what is desired, and it is hoped that any one who is able to throw light on the subject will do so.

EBENEZAR PAINE, son of Joseph and Patience Paine, of Harwich, married Rebecca Mayo, daughter of John Mayo, Aug. 14, 1714. He settled in that part of Harwich, now Brewster, and occupied the place that had been his father's, but selling out after 1730, he went to Chatham, Mass., and located, where he died and was buried. In the old church-yard in that place, near where he resided, is a stone erected to his memory with this inscription:

HERE LIES BURIED MR. EBENEZAR PAINE, WHO DECEASED AUG. 1, 1762, IN YE 72d YEAR OF HIS AGE.

Mr. Paine and wife were admitted members to the Harwich First Church, Sept. 17, 1717. His will bears date June 17, 1762, and was presented to Probate Sept. 7, 1762. He was visited by his cousin, Elisha, the New-light or Separatist preacher, in 1744, as we learn from a letter of that eminent preacher to his wife, which has been preserved, in which he says: "Our relations, the most of them, stand at a distance. Cousin Ebenezar Paine and his family seemed exceedingly opposite, except one daughter and her husband."

Their children, all born in Harwich, were:

Thomas Smith, Feb. 21, 1750-1, he settled upon a large tract of land in the South Parish, not a great distance westerly from Lieut. ## WOODSTOCK BRANCH.

By ROYAL PAINE, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

Errata.—Vol. II, p. 153, Geore Burgess Paine (458) died in Leghorn, Italy, not Florence.

P. 154, No. 462, is Rector of Mt. Calvary Ch., Baltimore.

No. 463, Martha Elizabeth Griswold, has two sons:

Daniel Paine Griswold, b. Jan. —, 1866.

Alexander Mitchell Griswold, b. 1869.

In Vol. I, p. 66, at the top, was an error in copying, which should read: "1708-9, January 18, Samuel Paine and Abigail Frizzell, both of Woodstock, intend marriage."

The following article from Judd's History of Hatfield, relating to Abigail, referred to in the last of the above errata, when a child, cannot fail to interest all who read it.

NARRATIVE OF THE CAPTIVITY OF ABIGAIL BARTHOLOMEW, at Hatfield, Mass., by the Indians in 1677, and her redemption in 1678. She was married in 1691-2, to Joseph Frizzell, who died May 13, 1704, in Woodstock, Conn., and she subsequently, in 1708-9, became the second wife of Samuel Paine, Sen., in Woodstock, and died in 1752, aged 79 years, leaving children by her first husband, and a daughter, Rebecca Paine, and a son, Ebenezer Paine, and grandchildren, Ebenezer, Jr., Leicester, Asa, Stephen, Mary and Hannah.

Hatfield attacked in 1677.

On the 19th of December, 1677, a year after the war was supposed to be closed, some Indians made an unexpected and destructive inroad upon Hatfield. About eleven o'clock in the forenoon, when the greater part of the men were dispersed in the meadows, and others were employed upon the frame of a house within the palisades, a party of Indians suddenly assaulted the latter, and shot down three men, and proceeding to other buildings, killed nine more persons, wounded four others, took seventeen captives, and burnt seven buildings; all the persons taken prisoners were women and children, except five. Connecticut sent up Capt. Thomas, with fifty men to aid in the pursuit. Had they come upon the Indians, the prisoners would have been in danger of the tomahawk. Benoni Stebbins escaped and returned to his friends at Deerfield, and reported that the Indians who had been at Hatfield were about twenty-seven including four women.

Above Northfield there was a parley between the Indians and the English to make a treaty of redemption. The endeavors of Hadley, Hatfield, Northampton, and Connecticut to ransom the prisoners were frustrated, and in October the captors and captives moved up the river, crossed the country to Lake Champlain, and after some delays, arrived in Canada, in wintry weather. These of Hatfield and Deerfield were the first that were ever forced to leave their homes in New England and travel through the dreary wilderness to Canada. Abigail Bartholomew, about five years of age, the daughter of William Bartholomew, then of Hatfield, was one of the captives, who were seventeen in number.

Benjamin Waite and Stephen Jennings, men of energy and perseverance undertook to redeem their wives and children, and the other captives. They obtained a commission from the government of Massachusetts, and went to Albany, N. Y. The ruling men frowned upon their enterprise, and after they had proceeded to Schenectady, brought them back by force to Albany, and sent them down to New York to Governor Andros, under pretense of some new order from him. Captain Brockhurst interceded for them, and they were sent back with a pass, and arrived in Albany, November 19th, 1677. Here they again met with discouragements, and were obliged to hire a Mohawk Indian to conduct them to Lake George. This savage was more humane and friendly than the governing men in the colony. The lake being open he fitted up for them a canoe about December 16th, and drew for them a draft of the lakes they were to pass, as they were the first New England men that ever passed down Lakes George and Champlain to Canada. They went down Lake George and carried their canoe two miles upon their backs to Lake Champlain, where they were hindered by ice and headwinds many days, and reached Chamblee on the sixth day of January, 1678. At Sorell and the vicinity they found the captives. They then went down to Quebec, where they were civilly entertained by the French Governor, who granted them a guard of eleven persons towards Albany. They left Quebec on the 19th day of April, 1678, and Sorell on the 2d day of May, having redeemed all the captives. The French had been very kind to them. On Wednesday, the 22d day of May they arrived in Albany, from which place a messenger was sent to Hatfield with the following letters, written by two plain men.

“ Loving Wife :

Albany, May 22d, 1678.

Having now opportunity to remember my kind love to thee and our child, and the rest of our friends, though we met with great afflictions and trouble since I see thee last, yet here is now an opportunity of joy and thanksgiving to God, that we are now pretty well and in a hopeful way to see the faces of one another before we take our final farewell of this present world. Likewise God hath raised up friends among our enemies, and there is but three of us dead of all those that were taken away—Sergeant Plympton, Samuel Russell, Samuel Foot's daughter. So I conclude, being in haste, and rest, your most affectionate husband, till death makes a separation. QUINTIN STOCKWELL.”

“ Albany, May 23, 1678.

To my loving friends and kindred at Hatfield :

These few lines are to let you understand that we are arrived at Albany now with the captives, and we now stand in need of assistance, for my charges is very great and heavy ; and therefore any that have any love to our condition, let it move them to come and help us in this strait. Three of the captives are murdered, old Goodman Plympton, Samuel Foot's daughter, Samuel Russell. All the rest are alive and well, and now at Albany, namely, Obadiah Dickinson and his child, Mary Foot and her child, Hannah Jennings and 3 children, Abigail Allis, Abigail Bartholomew, goodman Coleman's (2) children, Samuel Kellogg, his wife and 4 children, and Quintin Stockwell. I pray you hasten the matter, for it requires great haste. Stay not for the Sabbath, not shoeing of horses. We shall endeavour to meet you at Canterhook, (Kinderhook, it may be at Hou-sa-ton-ack. We must come very softly because of our wives and children. I pray you hasten them, stay not night nor day, for the matter requireth haste. Bring provisions with you for us. Your loving kinsman, BENJAMIN WAITE.

At Albany written from mine own hand. As I have been affected to yours all that were fatherless, be affected to me now, and hasten the matter, and stay not, and ease me of my charges. You shall not need to be afraid of any enemies."

They remained in Albany five days, and on Monday, May 27, walked twenty-two miles to Kinderhook, where they met men and horses from Hatfield. They rode through the woods to Westfield, and soon all reached Hatfield in safety. The captives had been absent eight months, and Waite and Jennings seven months. The day of their arrival was one of the most joyful days that Hatfield ever knew. The ransom of the captives cost above two hundred pounds, which was gathered by contributions among the English.

Copies of these letters were immediately sent to the Governor and council at Boston, who had previously appointed the 6th day of June as a day of fasting and humiliation. After receiving these letters they issued an additional notice to the public May 30.

"Knowing that the labor, hazard and charge of said Benjamin Waite and his associate have been great, we recommend their case with the captives for relief, to the pious charity of the elders, ministers and congregations of the several towns; that on the fast-day, they manifest their charity by contributing to the relief of said persons. And the ministers are desired to stir up the people thereunto. For quickening this work, we do hereby remit a copy of Benjamin Waite's letter to be read publicly, either before or upon that day; and what is freely given, is to be remitted to Mr. Anthony Stoddard, Mr. John Joliff, and Mr. John Richards, or either of them, who are appointed to deliver, and distribute the same to the ends aforesaid.

Signed by EDWARD RAWSON, Secretary."

Stephen Jennings' daughter who was born in Canada, he named Captivity. He removed to Brookfield, and Captivity married Abijah Bartlett of Brookfield.

In 1684, Rev. Increase Mather published a narrative of their captivity from Quintin Stockwell's own words.

For the lack of full material information from the descendants of 4 Samuel, (IV) the first child of Samuel (III) and Anne Peck, and 25 Noah, the sixth child, and 33 Stephen, the seventh child, I will return and take up the children of Samuel (III) and his second wife, Mrs. Abigail (Bartholomew) Frizzell.

Fourth Generation.

The children of Samuel (III) and Abigail (Frizzell) were :

45. REBECCA (IV), b. 1710, who married July 4, 1744. Deliverance Cleveland, of Canterbury, Conn., where she died 1784, leaving one daughter, Sarah. See page 91, Vol. I, Paine Family Records.
46. EBENEZER (IV), born in Woodstock, 1711: bap. Oct. 15, 1711. Aug. 23, 1735, published intentions of marriage with Mary Grosvenor of Pomfret, Conn., who died May 23, 1758, aged 43, in West Woodstock, where Ebenezer died March 29, 1789, aged 77 years, 5 mos. and 14 days, and their tombstones are in good preservation in 1882 in the Bungee Hill Cemetery.

Ebenezer's will was dated Feb. 5, 1789. His son Stephen was Ex'r. His estate was appraised at £380, 4s., which he gave to Moses Perrin (who married his eldest daughter), to Ebenezer, Jr., Leicester, Asa, Stephen, and Hannah. For further particulars see Vol. 1, Paine Family Records, page 92.

Fifth Generation.

The children of Ebenezer (IV) and Mary Grosvenor were six, all born in West Woodstock:

473. MARY (V), born Sept. 23, 1737; bap. April 26, 1741; married May 2, 1769, Moses Perrin, of Woodstock, who lived to old age, and died about 1810, or 1815. Mary died from the bite of a skunk that she attempted to kill.
474. EBENEZER, JR. (V), born Dec. 16, 1739; bap. April 26, 1741; married July 2, 1766, Esther Child, who was born May 2, 1743, daughter of Samuel Child, and Keziah Hutchins, of Killingly.

Ebenezer was a mason by trade, and removed to Woodstock, Vt., and thence to Hartland, Vt., where he died April 9, 1795, aged 55 years, 3 mos., and 23 d. His wife died March 6, 1839, aged 96 years. They had five daughters and two sons. An inventory of his estate was taken June 8, 1795, amounting to £530, 17s., Widow Esther, Administratrix.

475. LEICESTER (V), born May 11, 1742; bap. July 25, 1742. About 1780 he removed to Uxbridge, Mass., where he married Elizabeth Draper, daughter of David, and built a large house that is well known as the Paine homestead. On the 8th of December, 1787, the house of David Draper took fire, when Mr. Draper, aged 80, and his wife aged 82, and two grandchildren were burnt to death. David, Jr., and his wife escaped. Leicester and Elizabeth had two daughters and one son. He appears to have had two wives, or perhaps his wife's name was Mary Elizabeth, as the gravestone next his in the cemetery, is that of Mrs. Mary Paine, relict of Leicester, who died Nov. 6, 1830, aged 80 years. On his tombstone is inscribed, Mr. Leicester Paine, died July 7, 1821, aged 79 years.

"Come hither mortal, cast an eye,
Then go thy way, prepared to die;
Think on thy doom, for die thou must,
One day like me be turned to dust."

476. ASA (V), born Sept. 17, 1744; bap. Nov. 18, 1744. He married Miss ——— Child, daughter of Samuel and Keziah. Asa settled in Pomfret, Vt., had four sons, and was living in 1789, when his father's will was made.

477. STEPHEN (V), born Sept. 17, 1749; married May 19, 1795, Martha, daughter of Dr. Parker Morse, of Woodstock, Conn., by whom he had four sons, Charles, Ebenezer, Stephen and Elisha. He was a man of excellent judgment, sound morals, great decision of character, always seeking information, and a very industrious farmer. During his life, he held at different periods, most of the officers of honor and trust in the gift of his fellow townsmen. In 1788 he was a member of the Conn. State Convention, for ratification of the United States Constitution, and voted in the negative. For several years he represented Woodstock in the State Legislature, and thus became known among his townsmen as Deputy Paine.

After many years separation from his brother Asa, he resolved to make him a visit in Vermont, unannounced. Arriving at Asa's house at night as a stranger, he asked for the privilege of supper, lodging, and breakfast, for which he was willing to pay. Asa not recognizing him, told him as he had time enough he had better go to the tavern. Stephen then said: "Asa, don't you know me?" Asa was so shocked by the then well-known voice, that he was unable to speak a word until the next morning, when his voice was restored. Stephen died June 18, 1820. Martha died January 5, 1825.

THREE NOTABLE MARRIAGES OF EARLY DATE.

1772. This day, Ebenezer Bradish, Esq., of Cambridge, was united in the most agreeable state of human life to Miss Hannah Paine, daughter of the Hon. Timothy Paine, Esq., of this place,—of whom it may not be told her acquaintance, that she is one of the most deserving of her sex.

So shall each fair and fond companion bless,
where sense and virtue dwell in beauty's dress.

[Massachusetts Spy, Worcester, Oct. 21, 1772.]

See vol. I., p. 56.

1773. At Salem, Mass., on the 23d inst., Dr. William Paine, eldest son of the Hon. Timothy Paine, Esq., of this place, to Miss Lois Orne, daughter of Mr. Timothy Orne, deceased; a young lady with a fortune of 3,000 pounds sterling.

[Ibid., Sept. 30, 1773.]

See vol. I., p. 57.

1785. On the eighteenth inst., Mr. Nathaniel Paine, Attorney at Law, to the amiable Miss Elizabeth Chandler, second daughter of the late Gardner Chandler, deceased.

[Ibid., Dec. 22, 1785.]

See vol. I., p. 80.

The unusual proclamation to the world of the amount of fortune brought to her husband by one of these brides, was the result, on the one hand, of the fame which the Orne family enjoyed of being the wealthiest in Salem, and on the other of the different ideas prevailing in colonial times as to the standard of wealth from those of our own day. Mr. Orne's fortune of £25,000 sterling, was considered enormous for the period.

For the children of this marriage see vol. I, p. 78.

The third example was a marriage between cousins. The issue of the union is given in vol. I, p. 80. President John Adams in his "Diary and Correspondence," referring to the family of the bride says, "The family of Chandler were well-bred and agreeable people, and I as often visited them as my school and my duties in the lawyer's office would permit, especially Col. Gardner Chandler, with whom I was the most intimate."

SOME NOTES OF AN EARLY NEW HAMPSHIRE FAMILY.

PHILIP PAINE, "Yeoman," probably of Portsmouth, N. H., bought land in New Castle in 1713. Of his ancestry nothing certain has been ascertained. His wife, Christine, was the daughter of Peter Ball, of Portsmouth. He removed to Rye, and in 1738, April 11, he gave a deed "for and in consideration of his natural love and affection for his beloved son, John, and in consideration that the said John do pay to his brother, William, £50, and the same amount to his brother, Amos, fifteen acres of land in Rye." He died before 1746, in which year his son, John, as administrator, presented his inventory, amounting to £142 2s. 3d. In the following year, William acknowledged receipt of £50 from his brother, John, according to the terms of the above deed, and a few months later sells to John for £70, all his interest in the property of his father, Philip, at the time of his death.

It appears, then, that Philip Paine had three sons :

JOHN,                      WILLIAM,                      AMOS.

JOHN seems to have removed to Portsmouth, where he died in 1752; administration granted to Sarah Paine (probably his wife), July 29; inventory, amounting to £1,604 15s., presented September 27. He had a son, Amos, and a daughter, Christine, who married William Locke, of Rye.

WILLIAM married Susanna, daughter of Benjamin Seavey, of whom, in 1741, he bought five acres of land in Rye. He had a son :

PHILIP.

AMOS and wife, Lydia, sold five acres in Rye to Mark Kendall for £300, in 1741. He afterwards seems to have removed to Gilmanton, and possessed large estate. At Dover is recorded sale of a farm by Amos and wife, Lydia, of N. Hampton, to Amos, Jr., July, 1795.

PHILIP, the son of William, was born about 1756. At the outbreak of the Revolution, being then twenty years of age, he joined the continental army, enlisted for three years, and served his term. He was remarkable for his coolness and bravery, of which various instances have been narrated. He married Katrine St. Clair, a Scotch lady, and settled, after the war, in Parsonfield, York Co., Me. He was much esteemed for his strict integrity, sobriety and perseverance. His wife was also a woman of distinguished characteristics. Of a strong mind, a clear head, a vigorous frame, she was well qualified to endure the hardships of a frontier life. She was a practised and daring equestrian, and kept up the habit of riding on horseback till 85 years of age, when she was disabled by being thrown from her saddle and fracturing her thigh. Her voice was so clear that she could make it heard to the extreme limits of the large farm on which they resided. They had the following children :

JOHN,            WILLIAM,            POLLY,            KATRINE,
PHILIP,        BETSY, and a daughter.

JOHN, 2d son of Philip and Katrine, was born about 1777, (?) at Rye. He married Polly Mackintosh, and died 1871, æ. 96. He settled in Middletown, N. H., afterwards in Parsonfield, Me. He had the following children :

JOHN TREAT,        MARY,            NICHOLAS EMORY,
LOUIS,              ROWENA,        THOMAS.

JOHN TREAT, b. at Middletown, N. H.; mar. Mary Goodwin. Was for many years one of the leading lawyers at the Boston bar.

MARY, b. at Middletown, N. H.; mar. James Hull, Esq., of North Berwick, Me.

NICHOLAS E., b. at Middletown, N. H., Jan. 23, 1808. Removed from Maine in 1841 to Rochester, N. Y., where he lived for many years, and filled with honor and success various official positions of responsibility and distinction. He was District Attorney of the county, Mayor of the city, Commissioner of Education, etc. He married Abby Mary Stetson Sprague, daughter of Oatman Sprague, Esq. He now resides in New York and Westchester. His children are :

ELLEN SINCLAIR,        OATMAN SPRAGUE,        WILLIS S.

LOUISA, b. Middletown, N. H.; unmarried.

ROWENA, b. New Durham, N. H.; mar. 1st F. Allen, 2d Gen. T. Shaw.

OBITUARIES.

HORATIO PAINE, M.D. The sudden death of this already eminent physician was announced in the previous number of the Records, p. 171. The following minute, in relation thereto, was adopted by the Trustees of the Roosevelt Hospital in New York, with which he was connected.

"The Trustees of the Roosevelt Hospital are called to regret the severe loss their institution has sustained in the death of their late Superintendent, Dr. Horatio Paine.

"Dr. Paine was appointed Superintendent in the early part of 1871, in anticipation of the opening of the Hospital for patients; and having performed valuable service in the work of organization, continued to occupy the position until his death on the 1st of May, 1882, at the age of 43 years.

"The Trustees desire to express their sense of the value of his services. He has been always zealous in the performance of the many duties which devolved upon him, bringing to such performance great capacity and intelligence, and a courtesy which endeared him to all with whom he was brought in contact. He had worthily gained the entire confidence and respect of the Trustees, and his death makes a vacancy which can at best be inadequately filled.

"The Trustees direct that this minute be entered on their records and published, and that a copy be transmitted to the widow of Dr. Paine, with the assurance of their sympathy in her great bereavement."

Dr. Paine was the son of the late Judge Elijah Paine, of the Supreme Court, and a nephew of John Paine, Esq., and of the late Prof. Martyn Paine, of New York. He was born Dec. 5, 1838; graduated in Arts at Harvard, and in medicine from Penn. Med. Col., Philadelphia; served as surgeon in the late war; was sanitary inspector of New York city, and assistant superintendant of St. Luke's Hospital. He married Meta Roberts, daughter of John Pennington, Esq., of Philadelphia.

R. E. PAINE, M.D., of Camden, Me., died after a short illness, at his residence in that village, May 31, 1882. He was born in Exeter, Me., Sept. 18, 1834, where his father and mother still live. He was a graduate of Bowdoin Medical College, and was surgeon in the army during the civil war. After retiring from the service, 1867, he settled in Camden, where he was in active practice as a physician till his death. He was very successful and popular as a practitioner, and highly esteemed as a citizen. He married, first, Ada V. Pease, of Exeter, Aug. 23, 1857. She had a son, Arthur Carroll, b. June 21, 1858, and a daughter, Lelia Agnes, b. May 14, 1861, who died in infancy. He married, second, Marion Godard, of Washington, D.C., Jan. 17, 1864, who survives. Dr. Paine was a member of high standing in the Masonic Order, and was buried with the rites of that organization. He was much interested in genealogy, and was one of the earliest subscribers to the Paine Family Records.

EPHRAIM PAINE, son of Joshua and Rebecca Paine, of Amenia, N. Y., was born in Canterbury. He went with his father's family to the "Nine Partners," now Amenia. He spent a portion of his minority with a wealthy widow, who carried on farming in that place, and who, in after years, made him her chief manager, with great advantage to him. He early became a student of medicine with Dr. John Adams, of Oblong, and practiced medicine for sometime in Amenia. He was a prominent man in Old Dutchess County during the Revolutionary struggle, and a member of the Provincial Congress in 1775. He was appointed Judge for Dutchess Co., N. Y., Jan. 30, 1778, and resigned the position in 1781. He was a member of the Council of Appointment in 1780; a State Senator in 1780, 1781, 1783, 1784 and 1785. He died Aug. 10, 1785, aged 55. He was a man "of decided firmness, energy and unquestioned purity of character in public and private life." He was as nearly well known "for his eccentricities as for his public services." Many of his political, social and religious views, he practically carried out, and where they did not accord with the customs of the times, he was subjected to some criticism by his peers. He was twice married. His first wife was Elizabeth Harris, of Amenia. She died January 1, 1766, aged 35, leaving no children. His second wife was Martha Thompson, who died Dec. 7, 1806.

OBITUARIES.

ROBERT PAINE, D. D., Senior Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, died at his residence, in Aberdeen, Mississippi, on Wednesday, October 18, 1882. He was born in Person County, N. C., Nov. 12, 1799; was the son of James Paine and Mary A. Williams, of Oxford, N. C. His ancestors were in the Revolutionary war and took an active part in the great struggle for American liberty. His great grandfather, Dr. James Paine, was born in London, England, where he was educated and licensed as a physician. Bishop Paine's grandfather, Robert Paine, was an officer in the rebel army. His father was educated at Chapell Hill, the University of North Carolina. In 1814 his father moved to Giles County, Tennessee, where he reared a large and highly intelligent family. In early life, Bishop Paine attended school near Leasburg, N. C., and after moving to Tennessee, resumed his studies under two fine classical teachers, the Rev. D. C. Weir, D. D., and Prof. Alexander, whose school was located near Linnville, Giles County. Soon after he came to Tennessee he professed religion and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church; was licensed to preach in 1818. In 1829, he was elected President of La Grange College, Alabama, and for nineteen years administered the affairs of that institution with unusual skill and success. He was a member of the M. E. General Conference, from 1824 to 1844, and was Chairman of the Committee that reported a plan of Separation. In 1846 he was elected Bishop of the Church South, which office he filled with great ability for thirty-six years.

As a man, he was complete, well formed, vigorous and active; his voice clear, his judgment sound; his estimate of men just and impartial. As a preacher, he was instructive, and at times overwhelming in the grandeur of inspired oratory. Honored and beloved by all who knew him, he was a great and good man. The end was like the beginning, exceptionally good; having lived nobly, he died grandly. With no regrets for the past, and no fears of the future, but conscious of his integrity, and firmly trusting in the mercy of Him for whom he had so long labored, he passed to his reward.

GEORGE CLINTON PAINE.—Died in this village, on the 29th inst., at the residence of his grandson, James H. Paine, GEORGE CLINTON PAINE, aged 86. Mr. Paine came to this country with his father, Col. Brinton Paine, about 1790, being then a lad of some 13 years. Colonel Paine had distinguished himself as a brave and efficient officer in the Revolutionary war in various commands, and was a long time a prisoner in the "Old Sugar House," in New York, and on board a British prison-ship, in company with General Ethan Allen. In consideration of his meritorious services, two tracts of land were patented to his sons, Geo. Clinton Paine and Samuel Hills Paine. Col. Paine held various offices of trust in Old Tioga County, and the testimony taken by Col. Pickering, in 1791, in reference to alleged frauds in the treaty at Fort Stanwix, was certified by Col. Paine, as County Judge.

The subject of this notice has passed a long life in the Valley of the Chemung, maintaining unimpaired the reputation of an honest, upright man and good citizen. His venerable form was occasionally seen in our streets for the last year or two, and attracted attention by its high and noble bearing. He is about the last of the earlier settlers left among us. A faithful daughter attended him throughout his last illness with unremitting care and tenderness. His remains will be interred by the side of his son, the late BRINTON PAINE.

THE RHODE ISLAND FAMILY.

JOHN PAINE AND HIS DESCENDANTS.

INTRODUCTORY CHAPTER.

BY GEORGE T. PAINE.

The first of our surname who is known to have been an actual resident of that part of Rhode Island, formerly called Providence Colony, bore the name of the "Beloved Disciple." His grandfather, STEPHEN PAINE (I),* came from England in 1638, and was one of the founders and first settlers of Rehoboth, in the adjoining Colony of Plymouth. He had property in Providence Colony also, which, however, he soon sold; and from that time until 1712, there is no record of a Paine, Payne, Payn, or Pain, being a landholder, or even a resident, of the latter province as originally constituted. At that early day Providence Colony included what is now the County of Providence in Rhode Island, with the exception of three or four towns that were formerly a part of Rehoboth in Plymouth Colony, but which, in comparatively recent times, by a rectification of the State boundary lines, have been transferred to Rhode Island. Thus it has come to pass that, although Providence Colony was free from Paines for nearly a century after its foundation, that part of Rehoboth in which this family originated and lived for many years, is now within the bounds of the State of Rhode Island. This statement may serve to explain some apparent difficulties to those who are not familiar with the various changes in the boundary lines of that State.

STEPHEN PAINE, Jr. (II),* of Rehoboth, married Anne, daughter of Francis Chickering, of Dedham. They had nine children; the second son, JOHN, (†) being the progenitor of what I designate as "the Rhode Island family." He was the father of fifteen children, and, as one of his sons exercised paternal relations to twenty-eight, the difficulty of accurately tracing the entire descent will be readily understood by those accustomed to genealogical researches.

(*) See Vol. I, pp. 19, 21; also Chart I.

(†) Vol. I, p. 22.

JOHN PAIN (III), (as he spelled his name) was born in Rehoboth, now East Providence, April 3, 1658, and died in Providence, September 28, 1718. He married, after Feb. 3, 1680, Elizabeth, daughter of Josiah and Urania Belcher, of Boston. She was born July 10, 1663, and was living, it is supposed, in 1709, as in May of that year, a Mrs. Elizabeth Paine was admitted to communion with the church at Bristol. Swanzey was the adjoining town, and as her husband was a proprietor of Bristol lands as early as 1680, by inheritance from his father, Stephen, and his brother, Benjamin; and as his cousin, Nathaniel, was one of the leaders in that church and town, it is probable that the record was intended for her.

There is no record of her death, and no knowledge of her resting place, but she probably died within twelve months.

John's father and grandfather had purchased lands in Swanzey, and on his marriage he removed with his wife to that town. He became prominently connected with its public affairs and was one of its representative men.

His children, born in Rehoboth and Swanzey, were :

- |                                 |                                |
|---------------------------------|--------------------------------|
| 1. ELIZABETH, b. July 12, 1682. | 7. SOLOMON, b. June 21, 1696.  |
| 2. JOHN, b. Feb. 1683.          | 8. BENJAMIN, b. 1699.          |
| 3. STEPHEN, b. June 5, 1686.    | 9. NATHAN, b. 1701.            |
| 4. JOSIAH, b. Mar. 17, 1687.    | 10. GIDEON, b. 1703.           |
| 5. JOSEPH, b. May 3, 1693.      | 11. RANUR,* [Urania,] b. 1706. |
| 6. REBECCA, b. May 1, 1694.     |                                |

As stated above, there is no record of the death of Elizabeth, the wife of John Paine, but the presumption is strong that she passed away very soon after her admission to membership in the church at Bristol, and that John comforted himself with a second wife, Martha, somewhere about 1710.

John and Martha had four children, the oldest born at Swanzey, the others at Providence. They were :

- |                                |                                |
|--------------------------------|--------------------------------|
| 12. WILLIAM, b. Nov. 11, 1711. | 14. EZEKIEL, b. Aug. 26, 1715. |
| 13. ABIGAIL, b. Oct. 18, 1713. | 15. SAMUEL, b. Nov. 22, 1717.  |

John Pain held no public office after his removal to Rhode Island. He purchased his land from Richard Phillips, April 11, 1711, and in the deed is described as

* As written in Rehoboth church records, but she was, without doubt, named for her grandmother, Urania Belcher, and she wrote her name in later years, Urania. Her grandmother was the daughter of Edward and Elizabeth Rainsford, of Boston, and was born "4th of 4th month," 1638.

John Paine, weaver, of Swansea. He lived only a few years in Providence, dying Sept. 28, 1718, at 60 years of age. His widow married again, April 30, 1719, Abel Potter, whose first wife was Rebecca, the second daughter of her late husband, by Elizabeth Belcher—a connection that gave rise to some curious complications of relationship.

John Pain's farm was located in that suburb of Providence, now called Elmwood, and comprised about 110 acres, a portion of which bordered on the "great pond Mashapaugé." His house was situated on an upland in full view of the pond, and near the Greenwich road, (or street, as now called). It was replaced by one built by his grandson in the early part of this century, which is now standing. The property remained either in whole, or in part, in the possession of his descendents until 1812. It has since become very valuable. A portion of it, with a section of an adjoining farm, now belongs to the estate of a wealthy citizen of Rhode Island, who sold a part of it a few years since for $1,100,000, taking a mortgage upon it in part payment. The purchaser, after a few years, relinquished it to the seller on surrender of the mortgage. The original cash payment to him, with interest on the mortgage that had been regularly paid, amounted to over half a million of dollars, which was the sum he received for the "wear and tear of the land."

In 1712 he gave a portion of his farm to his son, John, Jr., "to settle my son in life," retaining the balance for himself and his "other heirs who have not yet settled;" the quotations being extracts from the deed.

John Pain left no will, but a paper in possession of one of his descendants, a lady in Providence, contains a document in his handwriting, expressing his intentions as to a division of his property. Perhaps, like many others, he delayed his signature too long. The following is a copy, the orthography only having been modernized:

"In the name of God, amen. I, John Pain, of the town of Providence, in his Majesty's Colony of Rhode Island and Providence Plantations, in New England, yeoman; I being sick and weak of body, yet by the blessing of God, of disposing memory, and I knowing that all men are subject to mortality, and not knowing how soon it may please God to remove me out this life, I make this my last will, hereby making void all former wills by me made either in word or writing, and this only to stand as my last will and testament.

"First. I give my spirit to God that gave it me, and my body to the earth to be decently buried by my executor hereafter named.

"Secondly. I give to my loving son, John Pain, a small strip of land, beginning at an old bridge at the Waterman Swamp, so-called, and to run a straight line to a small tree, standing north-north-west from said bridge, and is the westernmost elbow corner of the land I formerly gave to my said son, which strip of land is between the said line and the land I formerly gave to my said son.

"Thirdly. I give to my two sons, namely, Benjamin Pain and Nathan Pain, all my other land whereon I now dwell, together with my meadow and orchard and housing to be equally divided between them, when they shall attain to the age of twenty-and-one years, to them and their heirs forever, they paying such legacies as I shall appoint them, and render to my loving wife, Martha Pain, the third part of the profits of said land and meadows and housing, during her widowhood, and to be helpful to bring up my children until they may be put out to trades, yet it shall not be lawful for my said sons to sell any part of said land, except one to the other.

"Fourthly. I give to my loving wife, Martha Pain, one-third part of my movable estate after my debts are paid, for her relief and bringing up of our children, and to have equal privilege in my housing and other messuages during her widowhood.

"Fifthly. I give to my loving son, Stephen Paine, —, to be paid in — years after my decease."

[Sixthly and seventhly are similar devises to the sons, Josiah and Solomon, the amounts and years left blank. The succeeding five paragraphs to, and including the twelfth, are of like import, in favor of the sons, Gideon, William, Abijah, Samuel, and one whose name (Ezekiel?) is omitted, except that the legacies (not specified) are ordered to be paid as they severally attain to the age of 21 years.]

Let us study this memorandum and ascertain what were the intentions of the testator, and compare them with the actual distribution of the estate.

The daughters, Elizabeth, Rebecca and Urania, are not mentioned. The two first named had married, and I presume Rebecca was dead at the time this paper was written. Urania did not marry until seven years after her father's death.

John, the eldest son, had previously received a gift of land, but had a strip added by the intended will. The rest and residue of his Providence land is conditionally given to two of his younger sons, Benjamin and Nathan, both of whom had barely attained their majority. The widow was to receive one-third of the personal property outright, and one-third of the profits of the real estate during her widowhood, which, as we have seen, was not of long duration. All the other children were to receive legacies, so that if the testator had not previously disposed of his outlying lands, he probably intended that his executor should sell them and pay his bequests.

The document was probably drawn up after January, 1718, as Joseph, whose death occurred at that time, is not mentioned.

Stephen, who had married in 1715, and settled in Gloucester, had probably received aid from his father. Solomon had married and possibly removed to Smithfield, and had also probably been similarly aided. Both of these towns were in Providence Colony, being "west of the seven-mile line." Josiah had received land in Rehoboth. Benjamin and Nathan were next in order, and were selected to keep the homestead. The will was not signed, and there is no record that it was ever presented for probate.

October 13, 1718, on nomination of the widow, Martha, son John was appointed administrator of the movable estate of his father, and was specially directed "to have the charge of his deceased father's family, and provide all things as shall be needful for their present relief, clothing and provisions, and any other necessaries."

The settlement of the estate of John Pain occupied the attention of the Town Council for some time. On March 23, 1718-19, it was ordered "that the young children of Mr. John Pain, deceased, which he had by his surviving widow, Martha, shall be relieved in part out of their deceased father's estate until they (each child) shall attain to the age of seven years."

The widow then gave a particular account to the Council of the ages of the children. These are given elsewhere. Sixty pounds were ordered to be set off from the estate for the present support of herself and children.

The following note is from the records of the Council:

"April 20, 1719. By reason that the real estate of Mr. John Pain, deceased, is deemed not sufficient for more than one settlement, therefore it is granted that his son and heir, John Pain, shall have the whole of the deceased father's lands in Providence, excepting the third belonging to the widow of the deceased John Pain. Peleg Rhodes, Daniel Abbott and James Williams, were appointed to set off the widow's dower."

November 9, 1719, Mr. Pain's sons appeared before the Council and reported that they were unable to agree upon a partition. They were advised to agree, if possible, and if not to come before the Council at the next meeting, and a division would be made for them. But the record reads as follows:

"Upon a further debate of Mr. Pain's sons they have agreed to go equal in the partition of the estate of their deceased father, excepting their brother John, intending only what estate lieth in the town of Providence, and for the children of his second wife to go equal with the rest."

There are no records that give any further light on the subject of the homestead. By the intended will, Benjamin and Nathan were to have it, but John, Jr., received it, and it remained in possession of his heirs till the early part of the present century.

The estate was not fully administered upon at the death of the administrator in 1723, and not until 1733 was it finally divided, as at that time widow Hannah Pain was then directed by the Town Council "to deliver the portions of Abijah, Ezekiel and Samuel Pain, to each of their guardians chosen by them, and to take their receipts therefor for what she delivers."

The Council gave John, Jr., "all the land in Providence, etc.," while the other sons agreed to divide that portion which "lieth in the Town of Providence," between themselves, to the exclusion of John. How John came into peaceable possession is a question for lawyers, not for me.

The following additional particulars relating to EBENEZER PAINE, No. 58, and to his son, Hon. ROBERT T. PAINE, No. 98, of Edenton, N. C., should follow their respective records in Vol. I., pp. 112 and 129.

No. 58. EBENEZER PAINE (VI), the son of Seth Paine and Mabel Tyler, was born in Pomfret, Conn., August 23, 1758, and about 1778, while under the age of 21 years, he removed to North Carolina, and located at Edenton, where he engaged in shipbuilding. He was also in early life commander of his own vessels, and made several voyages to Europe. He married Sarah De Croe, of Perquimans Co., N. C., by whom he had eight children. His wife was living in May, 1833. He finally settled down to farming, but continued also his shipyard, which was afterwards kept up by his son, Robert Treat Paine. Ebenezer died August 17, 1826, at Troy, N. Y., while on a visit to his relatives.

No. 98. ROBERT TREAT PAINE (VII), son of Ebenezer, was born in North Carolina, 1812; graduated from Washington (now Trinity) College, Hartford, Conn., in 1832. In 1833 he studied law at Edenton, and commenced practising law in 1834, in which year he married Penelope L., daughter of Thomas Benbury, of Chowan Co., N. C., by whom he had children, one of whom, Sarah Elizabeth, born in 1836, was living in 1857. He was elected to the Commons of the General Assembly of N. C., first in 1838 (from the Co. of Chowan), and continuously up to 1848 inclusive. In January, 1847, he was appointed by the Governor of N. C., Colonel of the N. C. Regiment of Volunteers for the war with Mexico, and reached the seat of war March 22d following. Colonel Paine served on General Taylor's line in Mexico, and was stationed respectively near Camargo, at Buena Vista.

and Ariche's Mills, near Saltillo, and was commandant of Saltillo. No battle was fought on the line after the arrival of the regiment in Mexico: and returning home at the close of the war, he was discharged from service with the regiment at Smithville, N. C., August, 1848. He was appointed by President Taylor in April, 1849, and served two years on the Board of Commission of Claims against Mexico. The incidents of his service as an officer, during the Mexican war, as reported by his superior officers, and particularly by General Wool, under whose immediate command he was in Mexico, show that he was an officer of superior executive ability.

In August, 1855, while residing at Edenton, he was elected a member of the 34th Congressional District of N. C.

EDITORIAL PARAGRAPHS.

A remarkable interest in the history of the poet, John Howard Payne (most widely known as the author of "Home, Sweet Home"), has been lately awakened by the generally accepted report that his remains are about to be removed from Tunis to this country, and an appropriate monument erected at the place of their re-interment.

For this act of magnanimity, credit will be due to the liberality and patriotism of Mr. W. W. Corcoran, of Washington, D. C., who has assumed the entire charge of this praise-worthy undertaking, which is already in course of accomplishment.

As appropriate to the approaching event, it is intended to present to the readers of the "Records," in the April number, some particulars of the poet's life, with a tracing of his pedigree (which has been but recently ascertained with certainty), compiled by Josiah Paine, Esq., of Harwich, Mass.

On another page of this number is recorded the decease of the venerable Robert Paine, D.D., for many years the Senior Bishop of the Methodist Church South. Eminent for piety and learning, and remarkable for devotion to the arduous duties of his office, he has departed at a ripe old age, universally beloved and honored for his exemplary life and the loveliness of his character. Commemorative notices of him have appeared in very many southern journals, and numerous sermons have emanated from the pulpits of his denomination.

A genealogical history of his family has been promised for this magazine.

EASTHAM BRANCH.

JOHN HOWARD PAYNE, AUTHOR OF "HOME, SWEET HOME."

By JOSIAH PAINÉ, OF HARWICH, MASS.

JOHN HOWARD PAYNE, actor, dramatist and poet, was born in New York City on Broad Street, near Pearl Street, June 9, 1792, not long after his father's removal from Easthampton, L. I. His father was William Payne, a distinguished school teacher, who taught with good success in Boston, Easthampton and New York. His paternal grandfather was William Painé, Esq., a highly respected citizen of Eastham, Barnstable Co., Mass., whose father, Dea. John Painé, was for thirty-four years Clerk of that town, also Selectman and Representative, and whose father, Thomas Painé, was a settler as early as 1653.—an account of whom may be seen in a former number of the "Records." *

His mother was Sarah Isaacs, daughter of Aaron Isaacs, a highly respected citizen of Easthampton, who came from Hamburg. He was a man of means and of Jewish origin. She was a woman of great beauty and highly esteemed. She fell a victim to a pulmonary complaint, in 1807, when in her fiftieth year, and was interred in Boston, while her precocious son was in Union College. Her death was deeply lamented by her family and by all who intimately knew her.

In 1799, when John Howard was in his eighth year, his father, having received an invitation to establish an academical institution in Boston, removed thither with his family. At school he showed a great fondness for elocution, of which branch of education his father was an eminent instructor. He was encouraged in its study as its practice was considered beneficial to his condition of health, and his progress was remarkable. He soon evinced a taste for dramatic performances, and was allowed to take part in school "exhibitions," where plays were acted. His parts were always satisfactorily performed, and soon his fame as a boy-actor was heralded. His father was applied to by a distinguished actor in Boston to permit him to appear upon the boards as the young Roscius of America, with promises of considerable of the profits. But Mr. Payne and family declined the proposition. At this time Master Betty was upon the English stage as the youthful Roscius of England, and the papers of the day were loud in his praise. Young Payne's ambition was excited upon learning the success of Betty, the boy-actor, and he felt a desire to make his mark upon the boards. Finding he could not, the happy thought came to him to try his pen upon subjects relating to the stage. His criticisms upon actors were given to the newspapers, and were favorably noticed. Shortly he was invited to contribute articles upon subjects of general interest to the periodicals of the place.

Sometime about 1804, he became acquainted with - Woodworth (afterwards distinguished for his poetical writings), then a boy in a printing office, who was publishing a child's paper, and assisted him in editing it for awhile.

In the spring of 1804, his eldest brother, William Osborn Payne, (in partnership with R. B. Forbes, of New York, father of Robert B. Forbes, of Milton, Mass.) a young man of superior education, of literary taste, and widely respected, fell a victim to a throat disease, and his father thought it well to prepare his younger son for the counting-house and ultimately to fill the position now made vacant by the death of the elder. How long he was preparing for the untried field of labor, which he seems to have had no taste for, is not quite known. However, in November, 1805, he bid adieu to Boston, went to New York, and entered the counting-room of Mr. Forbes. This was his first leave of home, and his youthful pen was not slow in producing, for the pleasure of his friends, a short poem on the occasion, which appears in the London edition of his juvenile poems, entitled the "Lispings of the Muse." He soon found the duties in his new position not at all pleasant. Yearnings for the stage led him.

after a month's stay, to lay before his affectionate father his view of the position he was holding, the unsuitableness of the position to one of his taste and inclinations, and desired him to allow him the liberty to go upon the stage. His father, who had done all he could to crush out the "unfortunate propensity," was greatly moved at his restlessness and dislike of his business, and finally wrote him that, "if, after one month more, you find it irreconcilable to your health or feelings, I shall not insist upon your continuing in it. But, if in time the stage must be your destiny, I will assist you in making the best conditions that can be obtained."

Finding his father not prepared to give consent to his proposition, he undertook for amusement secretly to edit a little paper, entitled "The Thespian Mirror." This was in January, 1806. The paper gained for him a greater notoriety than he had anticipated, as not long after its appearance, an announcement was made in the "New York Evening Post," that an article relating to the "Thespian Mirror," would appear in the next issue of that journal. The boy-editor was greatly startled by the announcement, and in order to avert further publicity of his little sheet, which he felt would result in his exposure, and cause an uneasiness on the part of those to whom he was responsible, and especially his good father, who never omitted his watchful care over him, he sent a note to the editor, William Coleman, desiring him to omit any remarks that would lead to exposure, and at the same time stating some particulars respecting himself. Mr. Coleman thought best to give publicity to the particulars of the note, and the subsequent interview he had with him, which he did in the columns of his paper. His father who was still residing in Boston, and who was in correspondence with him, received the first intelligence of the affair, through the "Evening Post" of January 24th and 25th of that year. Although sorry that Mr. Forbes had not "been consulted or previously made acquainted with the design," he felt it not in his heart to greatly upbraid him for the literary course he had been pursuing clandestinely. In his letter written immediately after, he assured him he had no wish "to restrain or confine" his "views," but was "willing to give scope to" his "genius and latitude to" his "inclinations," and most affectionately urged him "to be governed by moderation and prudence in every undertaking," and to bear constantly in mind that he was "before a tremendous public, and that the altitude in which he stood required the greatest circumspection and the most strict integrity as well as the best resources."

It was now evident that the lad of thirteen, evincing such tastes for literature, was deserving of a collegiate course. Mr. Coleman who had given publicity to many facts in connection with him and his little paper, was now greatly interested in his behalf, and shortly, Mr. John E. Seaman, a benevolent gentleman, engaged in mercantile business in New York, offered to bear the expense of his education at Union College, providing young Payne's friends would consent to his leaving Mr. Forbes' counting room. The generous proposition so kindly made by Mr. Seaman was assented to, and he was allowed to withdraw from Mr. Forbes' employ, and prepare for his matriculation at College in Schenectady. In June, 1806, he started on his journey thither with Chas. B. Brown, a well known gentleman in literary circles at that time. His passage to Albany was by a sailing vessel up the Hudson, as it was before the days of steamboats. The passage was one of great pleasure to him. Among the occurrences that gave a peculiar interest to it, was the great eclipse of the sun, June 16, which had been anxiously looked for by the savants of that day. Mr. Brown, upon his arrival at Albany, parted company with him, and Robert M. Sedgwick, Esq., and Hon. Hermanus Bleecker, accompanied him to the College, and introduced him to President Nott, who received him with "an urbanity and kindness which continued throughout his collegiate career." The students received him with great cordiality; and soon, as a means towards his support, his pen was brought into use, and a college paper started by him, called the "Pastime," which was well patronized by the students. In June, 1807, when about a year

"Immured in learning's cloistered shade," his affectionate and devoted mother passed away, after a long and distressing illness, at her home in Boston. The sad news of her demise, though daily expected, was received with deep sorrow. His juvenile pen could not remain silent on the occasion, and a most fitting tribute appeared to her memory in print.

During the period of his collegiate career, Master Payne wrote several poetical pieces. His Fourth of July ode, written in 1807, when he was fifteen years of age, was published in London in 1815, with selections from his juvenile poems.

Unfortunately for him, before the completion of his collegiate course, his father became involved in financial troubles, and was well nigh reduced to indigence. Under the circumstances the son thought it a filial duty to quit the halls of learning, and try to assist his afflicted father, now advanced in years. His patron, Mr. Seaman, felt compelled, under the circumstances, to assent to his leaving, and his father and other near relatives, finding him determined to try his fortune on the stage, no longer opposed his wishes.

On the evening of the twenty-fourth of March, 1809, was his first appearance upon the theatrical boards; it was at the Park Theatre, New York, in the role of Young Norval. His father, who had so often reproved him for his love of the drama, his patron, Mr. Seaman, who so reluctantly acceded to his leaving College, and Joseph D. Fay, the editor of the "New York Mirror," but now a most intimate friend of the young actor, were present, and witnessed his performance from the scenes. This essay upon the stage was a success. The papers of the day teemed with words of praise. One said: "In force of genius and taste in belles-lettres, there are few actors on any stage who can claim any competition with him." His patron, Mr. Seaman, it is said, was so pleased with his performance, that at the close, on meeting him in the dressing-room, "caught him in his arms and wept over him like a child." What were the feelings of the father on that eventful night over the success attending the performances of his brilliant son, now acknowledged to be the young Roscius of America, are not known; but of a man of his temperament and education they can well be imagined. Happily for young Payne, notwithstanding the inclement night, the venture was a pecuniary success. As an actor his reputation was now well established. He was soon engaged to perform at Boston. His reception in that city was ardent and enthusiastic. His kinsman and friend, Robert Treat Paine, Jr., the poet of that day, wrote the prologue for the occasion. His performance was of a character to confirm the favorable opinion of the public in his favor.

After this, his first visit to Boston in the role of an actor, he played with great success in many of the large cities in the States. At Richmond he was warmly received. The amount resulting from his performances was beyond all precedent in that place. He was introduced to some of the best families. Gov. Tyler, father of John Tyler, late President of the United States, gave him a dinner, to which a large number of distinguished persons were invited.

In 1812, Mr. Payne's father having died, after a few days' illness, his attention was turned to a professional visit to London. He was greatly encouraged by intimate friends in Baltimore, and early in January, 1813, he bade adieu to his friends and native land, and took passage for England. He arrived in February, and on Friday evening, June 4, 1813, he appeared for the first time on the English boards at Drury Lane Theatre, London. He afterwards played in Liverpool, Birmingham, Litchfield, and many other places, with much success.

In 1814, he visited Ireland, and played with good success in Dublin, Waterford and Cork. At Dublin he became acquainted with many distinguished men. Among them Daniel O'Connell and Charles Phillips, the eminent Irish barrister. With these gentlemen, during his stay, he went to Lake Killarney, where at a dinner on Innisfallen Island, Phillips, after remarks complimentary to Mr. Payne, made the celebrated speech on America and Washington, which has ever since been familiar to school boys as a favorite elocutionary exercise.

In the spring of 1815 he went to France, and was at Paris when Napoleon returned from Elba. He visited Talma, the great French actor, who gave him a kind reception. It was during this visit that his attention was particularly turned to the literature of the stage. He made a free version of the French melodrama, known as the "Maid and Magpie," which, on his return to England, he disposed of to the manager of the Covent Garden Theatre, with some profit to himself. After this time, Mr. Payne produced a great number of plays that were well received, but from which he derived no great advantage. Among them were: "Brutus, or the Fall of Tarquin," "Oswali of Athens," "Richelieu, or the Broken Heart," "Charles II, the Merry Monarch," "Procrastination," "Therese, the Orphan of Geneva," "The Two Galley Slaves," "Love in Humble Life," "Twas I," "Peter Sminks," "Not Invited," "Mill of the Lake," "Accusation," "Clari, the Maid of Milan," "England's Good Old Days," "Norah, the Girl of Erin," and "The Rival Monarchs."

“Clari, the Maid of Milan,” an opera, containing the popular song, “Home, Sweet Home,” was brought out while he was at Paris in 1823. The copyright he sold Mr. Miller, but for what sum does not appear; but evidently the sum was quite satisfactory, as with it, and what he expected from a one-act piece coming out at the Haymarket, he humorously assured his sister in a letter written soon after disposing of the copyright, of his confidence in having “bread and cheese for the rest of the year.”

After a residence abroad a few months short of twenty years, he returned to this country, landing in his native city, July 25, 1832. His reception was most cordial. A complimentary benefit was soon given by the citizens of New York at the Park Theatre of a very satisfactory character. Afterwards a public dinner was given him at City Hall, where, in the presence of a large number of the first literary and professional men of the city, he eloquently responded to the following appropriate toast:

“OUR DISTINGUISHED COUNTRYMAN, JOHN HOWARD PAYNE. The family of Literature welcomes him to the HOME whose praises he has so sweetly sung.”

Boston, for awhile his home in boyhood, followed New York, and gave him a complimentary benefit, but the results pecuniarily were not so satisfactory. After this time, for many years, Mr. Payne was engaged in literary pursuits. At one time he was a contributor to the “Democratic Review.”

In 1841, Mr. Payne went to Tunis as the American Consul, having received his appointment from President Tyler, at the request of his numerous friends, among them the President's two sons. There his duties were performed with credit to himself and his country. He returned to this country during Mr. Polk's administration.

His visit to Jenny Lind at her apartments on Columbia Street, Brooklyn, when she was giving her concerts, is described as one of great interest to her. He was received with the greatest cordiality. She assured him that the “pleasure of seeing the author of her favorite hymn would mark one of the happiest days of her life,” and gave him a free ticket to all her concerts on the Continent.

Receiving a second appointment to the Consulate at Tunis, he went thither to return no more in life. He passed to his rest, April 9, 1852, from an attack of inflammatory rheumatism, in the 60th year of his age, and was interred in the Protestant Cemetery in that city.

Mr. Payne was never married. In person he was of medium size. He possessed a gentle disposition, and there was nothing selfish or ungenerous in his nature. He was possessed of a "rich and varied stock of information," which, together with "his brilliant wit, general amiability and good nature, made him the most agreeable of companions." It is said, "his ordinary conversation was not only faultless but perfectly fascinating."

Mr. Payne's remains were disinterred at Tunis, January 5, 1883, where they were buried, and are now on their way to his native land for their final resting place in the Oak Hill Cemetery, Georgetown, D. C., in a lot selected by Mr. W. W. Corcoran, of Washington, D. C., at whose expense they have been removed, and are to be buried.

[The mortal remains of John Howard Payne arrived at New York in the Burgundia, March 22, 1883. They were received by two representatives of Mr. Corcoran, and were conveyed to the City Hall, where they lay in state till the afternoon of the following day, the Governor's room having been assigned for their reception by the Board of Aldermen. Thousands of persons visited the Hall during their brief stay, and the daily papers generally signalized the event by extended accounts of the poet's life and works. On Friday afternoon the remains were taken by a special car to Washington, accompanied to the train by an honorable escort. The re-interment in the spot selected by Mr. Corcoran will take place, with appropriate ceremonies, on the 9th of June, the 91st anniversary of his birth.—EDITOR.]

THE RHODE ISLAND FAMILY.

DESCENDANTS OF JOHN PAIN (3) OF PROVIDENCE.

BY DANIEL C. PAYNE, of De Kalb, N. Y.

As related in the preceding paper of this series (pp. 209-214), JOHN PAINE III (or PAIN, as he generally spelled his name), of Swanzev and Providence, grandson of Stephen I, of Rehoboth, was blessed with fifteen children by his two wives, Elizabeth and Martha, twelve of whom were sons. [See Chart I.]

Fourth Generation.

JOHN, Jr., IV, the oldest of the number (designated as 21 in Chart I), was born Feb. —, 1683, at Rehoboth. He also was twice married, first to Mary Davis, and second to Hannah —. Removed to Providence about 1712. In 1718 was appointed administrator of his father's estate. He died July 19, 1723, æ. 40, leaving the estate in Cranston, inherited from his father, to his son, John v. His will also provides for four daughters. One, Mary, is mentioned by name, as a child of a former wife, "whose maiden name was Mary Davis." The names of the other three daughters are not given, but tradition has assigned to them husbands, named Sayles, or Searles, Noah Whitman and Appleby, respectively. In Providence Records is recorded, under date of June 21, 1726, the marriage of Hannah Pain to John Appleby, of Warwick, which seems to confirm the tradition in one instance at least. The widow, Hannah, is named sole Executrix.

Fifth Generation.

JOHN V, the only son of the preceding, was born 1719. After the death of his father he was brought up in the family of an uncle until he came of age, when he came into possession of the estate in Cranston from his father, and married Hannah Poole, of Weymouth, a girl of 16. He was commissioned Lieutenant of a military company in 1753, and Captain in 1754. He died in Cranston, 1794, æ. 75.

Children :

JOHN VI, b. July 18, 1740; was a soldier in the war of independence, and died, unmarried, before his father.

ISAAC VI, b. Aug. 21, 1742; settled in Foster, R. I.

SARAH VI, b. June 13, 1744; mar. Asa Franklin, and was mother of the late Asa P. Franklin, of Providence.

HANNAH VI, b. Feb. 11, 1748; mar. — Williams, of Providence.

OLIVER VI, b. Dec. 12, 1754; mar. Abigail Thornton, dau. of John and Anne Thornton (b. in Johnston, R. I., Sept. 2, 1771, and d. there 1853), and d. Dec. 29, 1819.

REBECCA VI, b. May 4, 1757; mar. Abner Field, of Cranston, and settled in Chester, N. Y.

WILLIAM VI, b. Nov. 5, 1759.

I leave for others to continue the pedigree of the above named children of John v, and Hannah (Poole) Pain, except that of the last named, the object of the writer being to set forth that sub-division of the Rhode Island family, with which he is more directly connected. For this reason, also, the designation by numbers of the individuals of this branch may conveniently begin at this point.

Sixth Generation.

1. WILLIAM PAYN VI, as he usually signed his name, the youngest son and child of John and Hannah (Poole) Pain, was born in Cranston, R. I., Nov. 5, 1759, and lived with his father on the homestead, both before and after his marriage, in 1789, to Amy Clark (b. 1765), of Cumberland, R. I., and, in company with his brother Oliver, carried on the farm, until the close of the last century. For several years before that there had been going on an increasing emigration from the Eastern States to the still unsettled regions of Central and Western New York, then regarded as the "far West." In the winter of the year 1800, William Payn, with his wife and four children, and accompanied by a number of other families from among his neighbors, took up the line of march for that new and fertile country. He settled first in the town of Fairfield, Herkimer Co., upon a tract known as the "Royal Grant," being the territory lying between the East and West Canada Creeks. The few adventurous and hardy pioneers who had, previous to the revolutionary war, made their way to these remote districts, had been, during the hostilities, carried off as captives, or driven away, and their rude dwellings burned by the Royalists and their Indian allies. After the return of peace and the establishment of the Republic, many families from the older settlements, attracted by reports of the richness of the soil and the cheapness of the land, began to turn their faces thitherward.

Among those from Rhode Island, as already stated, was William Payn. Under his hands, and those of his fellow-settlers, many acres were cleared, and wide fields of golden grain were ready for the sickle, where but a short time before were only interminable and almost impenetrable forests. For twenty years he lived in Fairfield, where four more children were born to him. In course of time, however, some of his neighbors began to look about for a milder climate, and removed to the Valley of the St. Lawrence, on the northwestern border of the State, which they considered as possessing the desired advantages. Following their example, he again struck his tent and removed to Rossie, in St. Lawrence Co., near a hamlet now called Somerville, and began anew to fight the battle with nature and reclaim for the use of man the rich but untrained soil. In this new contest, however, he had the aid of additional hands and courageous hearts, several of his sons having grown to sturdy manhood, and his daughters not less efficient in their appropriate share of duty.

William Payn died after a brief sickness of inflammation of the brain, Jan. 14, 1830, aged 72 years. He is still remembered by many who knew and honored him as a man of unswerving integrity, a strict sense of justice, and exercising a wholesome influence among those by whom he was surrounded. Religious without moroseness, and with a good store of plain sense, not without a spice of humor, he was a favorite with the young and old of the community. His wife, Amy, was from all accounts a meet companion in every way to so worthy a man. A woman of strong judgment, cheerful and contented disposition, quick to apprehend and prompt to execute, she proved herself equal to the trying duties of a pioneer life. After a few years of gradual decline, she died peacefully at the home of her oldest son, Apr. 13, 1841, æ 76 years.

The following were their children; the first four born in Cranston, R. I., the others in Fairfield, N. Y.

2. PARDON VII, b. Oct. 22, 1789.
3. BENJAMIN VII, b. July 12, 1791.—

Children of William and Amy (Clark) Payne.

2, PARDON VII, was born Oct. 22, 1789, in Cranston, R. I.; married Betsy K., dau. of Kendall Boutwell, of Antwerp, N. Y. (b. March 2, 1803, in Chester, Vt.) He served in the war of 1812; had command of a company at Sackett's Harbor, N. Y., and was a pensioner of the U. S. until his death, which occurred suddenly at Sprague's Corners (now Keeneville), Nov. 16, 1867, æ 78, while sitting in his chair, after returning from his barn, and apparently in his usual health. The following is from an obituary notice published at the time in the St. Lawrence Republican:

"Captain Payne was one of the first settlers in the town of Rossie, and a resident of the vicinity for the greater portion of a long and useful life. Endowed with a fine physical development, added to a cultured mind and skilful hand, he exerted a corresponding influence among the pioneers of the Oswegatchie country. In brief he was an ardent co-operator in the early advancement of education, a steadfast adherent to the political creed of Jefferson and Jackson, a warm supporter of Abraham Lincoln, and a sincere Christian."

His exemplary habits and sound judgment were duly appreciated by his fellow-townsmen, and hence he was at different times selected by them to fill many places of responsibility and trust.

His twelve children were the following; all born in Rossie, except the last two, who were born in Wilna, N. Y., in the adjoining County of Jefferson.

WORCESTER BRANCH.

ADDITIONAL NOTES.

On p. 77, vol. 1, "Paine Fam. Records," the writer stated that Dr. William Paine was appointed Clerk of the House of Assembly of New Brunswick at its first session. This statement has since been doubted by a resident of St. John, N. B., but its entire correctness has now been verified by finding among the papers of Dr. Paine the original notice of his appointment by the Governor. He was one of four members elected in the fall of 1785 to the House of Assembly from Charlotte County, and received the appointment of Clerk in January, 1786, as appears by the following document:

"New Brunswick in Council, 3d January, 1786.

"His Excellency orders a Commission, under the Great Seal, to be made out, appointing William Paine, Esq., Clerk of the Assembly. William Paine, Esq., attended, and took the oaths required by Law as Clerk of the Assembly.

"By order of the Governor,

"THOS. KNOX, D. J. C."

In February, 1786, at the first session of the Assembly, he was chosen Speaker of that body, but as he left the Province the next year, did not hold the office long. He was also one of the first Common Council of the City of St. John, having been appointed to that office by the Governor, May 18, 1775.

Mention was made, on the same page of the "Records," of Dr. Paine's ownership of an island in Passamaquoddy Bay. It has since been ascertained by letters to Dr. P., that he retained possession of this island till about the year 1822, when he sold it to parties in St. John. He seemed to have had several offers for the island during the two or three years preceding his disposal of it, and from letters received by him it would appear that it was considered of value as a fishing station, it affording special facilities for carrying on the herring fishery.

Among the papers of Dr. Paine which have lately come under the notice of the writer, is a form of a memorial in his handwriting, for presentation to Gov. Thos. Carlton, asking his consideration of the "necessity and expediency of an early attention to the establishment in this infant province of an academy, or school of liberal arts and sciences." Speaking of the loyalists as the "Loyal Adventurers," he says, "Many of them upon removing had sons, whose time of life and former hopes call for an immediate attention to their education, etc. Your memorialists do, therefore, most earnestly request your Excellency will be pleased to grant a charter for the establishing and founding such an academy in some convenient place in the Province." It was also asked that land be granted on which buildings could be erected, and other lands granted for the use and benefit of the academy.

This academy was finally established at Fredericton, and is now known as the "University of New Brunswick." It was called at one time the "College," and in 1829 was granted a Royal Charter, and named "Kings College."

Next year being the centennial anniversary of the settlement of the loyalists in the Provinces, which is to be celebrated in an appropriate manner at St. John, will probably bring out many new facts in regard to their history, and may also be the means of obtaining additional information in regard to the Paines and their relatives, the Chandlers, who were among the earliest arrivals there after the close of the war in America.

OBITUARIES.

DANIEL PAINE, of Rosemond, Ill., a venerable member of the Woodstock branch of the Rehoboth family, departed this life at his home, Dec. 20, 1882, in his 86th year. An extended notice of him having already appeared in its proper place [P. F. Records, vol. 2, p. 34, No. 190], there is little to add to the honorable record of his life as there given. He died as he had lived, a sincere Christian in faith and practice, enjoying the affectionate regard of all who knew him, looking without dread to the approaching event, which came at last with peaceful footsteps, covering its presence with a gentle sleep. He was during the most of his long life very exact and devout in family prayers, and long after he could neither see or hear a word, he was a regular attendant at public worship. Of his eleven children, but four survive him.

DIED, at Bangor, Me., Feb. 2, 1883, MR. SETH PAINE, aged 81 years, and on the 24th of the same month, his brother, THEODORE PAINE, in his 72d year. They were of the Eastham branch of the Paine family. Both have for a long course of years been actively engaged in business at Bangor, always sustaining a high character for integrity and other business qualities. Seth, for fifteen consecutive years held the office of City Treasurer of Bangor, a place of great responsibility, the duties of which he performed with the strictest integrity and to the entire satisfaction of the public. His failing health and strength, however, at last compelled him to withdraw from all active duties and pursuits, and for several years, like his brother Theodore, he gave way to lingering disease, until death came to their relief as above stated. Seth leaves a widow and one son, Sumner C. Paine, at the present time a Lieutenant in the U. S. Navy. Theodore was never married.

DIED, at Grand Junction, Col., Jan. 12, 1883, of typho-pneumonia, JOHN EDWARD PAINE, youngest son of Stephen O. Paine, late of Platteville, Wis., and lineal descendant of Benjamin Paine, of Smithfield, R. I. He was born April 30, 1859, being in his 23d year at the date of his death. A young man of unusual natural ability and pleasing manners, he was highly respected by all who knew him.

IN order to find room for all the material in type, it has been necessary to add four extra pages to this issue.

BOUND copies of Volume One, containing the first eight numbers of the Records, with a copious Index, will be furnished for Two Dollars each, and will be sent postpaid to any address upon receipt of the price.

THE current volume will be completed with the October issue, and will contain twelve numbers, an Index and Title-page. The two volumes will comprise a vast amount of interesting and authentic information on the subjects to which the work is devoted, hitherto unattainable. There is still available an abundance of similar material for at least another volume. The editor is desirous of continuing the publication should there be sufficient encouragement. A number of subscribers who are still in arrears are respectfully reminded that prompt payment of their dues is a good way to manifest their approval of the undertaking.

PAINÉ GENEALOGY: IPSWICH BRANCH.

By ALBERT W. PAINÉ, Bangor, Maine.

In previous numbers of the RECORDS a brief sketch has been given of a few individual members of the family, about whom more information would naturally be very welcome, or even desirable. At the suggestion of the editor the writer proposes to give an occasional, more extended account of such, though it may be at the expense of a few repetitions of what has been briefly related in previous communications. This is more particularly true of the early members of the line, who thus sustain a paternal relation to all the families now living. Chief among them is its original immigrant ancestor,

WILLIAM PAINÉ.

A general account of the biography of this ancestor has already been given in detached passages in Nos. 1 and 4 of the RECORDS, but as many other important facts have come to the knowledge of the writer since, it has been thought best to give in a single article a connected view of his whole history, although at the expense of an occasional repetition.

The subject of this notice was born in Suffolk County, England, at or in the immediate neighborhood of Nowton, in 1598-9. He was the son of one of the same name, who for many years was "Lord of the Manor" of that parish, a descendant of Sir Thomas Payne, Knight, who resided at Leicester, near the famous battlefield of Bosworth, in about the year 1400. The coat of arms of the family leaves little doubt of the fact that he was a lineal descendant of the same ancestor with Hugh de Payen, the celebrated Knight Templar of the 12th century, who acted so important a part in the first Crusade, and subsequently was a principal originator of the order known as the "Templars of the Cross," which, under his especial direction, was organized in 1118. Those interested in this portion of the history will find a full detail of the facts, going to establish the theory, in the pages of the RECORDS, No. XIV, p. 172.

William Paine came to America from his native county in England in the ship "Increase," in 1635, being then of the age of 37 years, with his wife and five children. He landed at Boston, from whence he soon after went to Watertown, where he established his residence and continued it for about five years. He was one of the earliest inhabitants of that place, and at once took a very prominent position as a citizen. He was among the earliest land holders, and held by purchase several lots of land in different parts of the town. He established his residence on what was then known as the "Road to the Pond." While resident there he became principal proprietor of the Mill or Manufacturing establishment, which had shortly before been started at that place, and was the first of the kind in America. Of this he continued the owner and proprietor until his death, in 1660, when it passed to his son John.

As connected with this part of our ancestor's history, it may be of interest to the reader to know that the writer of this, a few months ago, had the curiosity to hunt out and determine the exact locality of his residence and place of business, while thus living at Watertown. With the aid of old maps and more especially that to be found in the History of Watertown, the work was very readily accomplished. His dwelling house was on a lot of land on the north side of Washington Street, about a quarter of a mile west from Fresh Pond, where are now located the extensive ice houses at the head of those inland waters. The exact lot is in the corner of the street where that street is intersected by another. This lot is now located in the newly incorporated town of Belmont. Passing down the long descending hill towards Charles River, we soon come to the locality of his mill or manufactory, being the same now occupied for a like purpose, with the dam occupying the same line with his, extending from the west shore of the river to the head of the peninsula, which forms the conducting wall for the water as it passes towards the mill, as through a flume. This peculiar formation of the river leaves no doubt of its identity. A church still stands on the lot originally dedicated to that purpose, though the present erection is of modern date. The present occupancy is that of the Unitarian Society, under the pastorship of Rev. Mr. Knapp. The interest which every descendant of our ancestor must have in these details must be a full apology for the space occupied in detailing them.

After a residence of some five years at Watertown Mr. Paine, with his brother Robert and a few others, procured a grant, from the Legislature, of land at Ipswich, "with leave to settle a village there," and where he immediately after took up his residence. This was the origin of that town. In the meantime he, as also his brother, were admitted "freemen." After as well as before his settlement at Ipswich, he became very generally known and recognized as a man of integrity and sound judgment, and, as is apparent from his subsequent history, as a man of large wealth and public spirit. He also proved himself to be a man of extensive business capacity and enterprising character, among the leading men of his age in this new country. He was on most familiar terms with the leading men of the State, and especially with Gov. Dudley, Govs. Winthrop, Sen. and Jr., Rev. John Davenport and other men of that class. From the correspondence which has lately come to light, he is shown to have been in close correspondence with these gentlemen and mutually consulted in matters of importance at different periods of their lives.

As a result of this character and intimacy he was frequently appointed by the Legislature as referee, or arbiter, to settle difficult and disputed questions of boundaries between different towns and localities, especially between Dover and its adjacent territory, Exeter and Hampton, Dover and Exeter, Hampton and Salisbury, Hampton and Colchester, and other disputes connected with these places. In 1645 he was with others incorporated into the "Free Adventurers" enterprise, to carry on the business of opening Western Massachusetts to the occupancy of its territory. Grants were made at different times by the Legislature in promotion of its designs, extending even to the Hudson River, to Fort Aurania, near Albany, N. Y. This enterprise he fostered during all the remainder of his life, his work being frequently recognized by the Legislature in different ways by grants. The Dutch then held possession of the river, and one of the last acts of Mr. Paine was to petition the Legislature to open negotiations with that government, to make the navigation free to the public. His petition was favorably received, but other and successful measures adopted by the King, just at that time, freed the whole country of Dutch rule, and rendered further efforts in that line unnecessary.

The public spirit and enterprise of our ancestor was further evidenced by many other important works undertaken by him. Among them was the establishment of iron works at Lynn, known even now as the "Hammersmith," so named from the English town from which many of the workers emigrated. These works were the first ever carried on in America. Evidence of them still exists on the Saugus River and attract the attention of the curious by the vast piles of "scoria" heaped up even now where they were originally produced two and a half centuries ago.

His success at Lynn led him shortly after to enter upon the similar enterprise of establishing like works at Braintree, which he also prosecuted with vigor and success.

After Winthrop's inauguration as Governor of Connecticut a discovery of iron ore was made at New Haven, and the attention of the citizens generally enlisted in favor of working the same. Gov. Winthrop's feelings were deeply enlisted in the enterprise of working them, and as a result he invited Mr. Paine's co-operation to effect the object. A very serious objection was raised by the citizens against going abroad for help, and hence a violent remonstrance was made to his nomination. All opposition, however, soon gave way to his superintendency, and he consequently prosecuted the works with success, though he never became owner of the land.

While engaged in the "Adventurers" work, the "Sturbridge Black Lead Mines" were discovered, or made known to the public, and under Mr. Paine's oversight and interest were worked for a long time and with apparent success. In this, too, he was interested in company with Gov. Winthrop, who favored and patronized the undertaking.

After a residence of some fifteen years in Ipswich, Mr. Paine removed to Boston, where he spent the remainder of his life as a merchant. As such he became a leading man in the business of that town. On the death of his father he became possessed of a large property, and this it would appear he invested in the various departments of trade and business. His stock of goods was very large, judging from the inventory of his estate in Probate, consisting of the greatest variety and quantity of every conceivable article subject to the wants of man. It would seem that he was for his day a large importer, and as such owned parts of five vessels at the time of his death, and had then on the high seas "adventures" to England and Jamaica. He was besides largely interested in a trading establishment at Piscataqua, or Portsmouth, which in his will he bestowed on his son to prosecute. He was also a large landholder, having lands, besides those named in Watertown and Ipswich as well as in Boston, other lands in Topsfield, Rowley and Salem, a mill privilege in Exeter, and the different properties in Lynn and Braintree. "Thompson's Island" in Boston harbor was also his property, which he gave to his son John.

Besides his enterprising and business qualifications, Mr. Paine was also signalized for his devotion to educational and other endowments. The Free School at Ipswich was originated by him and his brother, with a few others, and liberally endowed by him to some extent during his life, and still more so by his will. As a remarkable fact in the history of such investments, it is noticeable that both the institution and its endowment still remain in force and alive agreeably to his will that it should "never be sold or wasted." The will has been ever since observed and the fund is still yielding its annual income. "Jeffries' Neck" and the pecuniary devise are both at this day the object of care of the "Feoffees of the School," the former being annually rented as a place of resort for summer residents, though the writer, on a recent visit to the locality, found the people unmindful, and indeed ignorant in a great degree of the origin of the gift and of the conditions of its holding. Harvard College was also by his will made an object of his bounty, and all the ministers in his neighborhood, to the number of eight in all, were pecuniarily remembered.

Mr. Paine died at Boston, Oct. 10, 1660, leaving his wife Hannah a widow, and his son John their only surviving child. His daughter Hannah had married Samuel Appleton, the ancestor of the extensive Appleton family, but she had died before himself, leaving a son of the same name with his father, and two daughters. Mr.

Paine left a will which is still to be seen in the Probate Office in Boston, together with the inventory of his estate. His body is probably buried in the Granary Cemetery of that city, immediately under the rear window of the Atheneum Library building.

The English family possessed a coat of arms being that known as the "Arms of Payne of Market Bosworth, County of Leicester and of the County of Suffolk." A minute description is given of its meaning by Burke in his Encyclopædia of Heraldry, from which we learn that the ancestor of the line was a Crusader, and that in the crusade he, by his bravery, won the distinction and rank of a Knight. This coat of arms Wm. Paine was accustomed to use after his settlement in this country. An engraving of the arms with a full description of its meaning forms a part of the recently published work, entitled, "Paine Genealogy, Ipswich Branch."

ELISHA PAYNE, son of Rev. Elisha and Mary Paine, of Canterbury, Conn., graduated at Yale College in 1750; studied law, and commenced practice in his native town. In 1761 or 62, he entered into the mercantile business with his brother-in-law, Dr. Nathan Waldo, in Canterbury, the latter attending to the business of the firm. In or about 1765, he moved to Plainfield, where he married his second wife, and resided until 1774, when he went to Cardigan, now Orange, N. H., of which place he was one of the original proprietors, and became a resident, having commenced the work of clearing his farm the year previous, sending up workmen from his Connecticut home for the purpose. It is said the first grist mill and also the first saw mill erected in Cardigan were owned by him. Not long after the year 1778, he removed to Lebanon to a site near Mascoma Lake, where he passed the remainder of his days.

He took a prominent part in public affairs in Grafton County, almost from the time it was constituted. He was member of the "Cornish Convention," in 1778, from Cardigan, and favored the union of the sixteen towns of New Hampshire, of which Cardigan was one, with Vermont, and when the Union was effected in 1778, he not only was chosen to represent that town in the Assembly of Vermont, but was chosen by the people of the State a Councilor. He choose rather to counsel the Legislative body than the Executive, and therefore resigned the office of Councilor, and retained his seat in the General Assembly, opposing the dissolution of the union of the several towns which was agitated. His abilities were soon known to the Governor and Council, and upon the appointment of Jonas Fay and Joseph Marsh delegates to the Continental Congress that year, he was invited to accompany them.

Col. Paine favored the union of the forty-three New Hampshire towns in 1781, and was one of the Committee appointed at the Convention held at Charlestown in that State, to make a report in reference to the matter. He was chosen one of the Committee recommended to be chosen to appear before the Assembly of Vermont to ask for the union, and as the chairman, addressed the Assembly. The union was effected and he took his seat in the Vermont Legislature as a member from Lebanon, April 6, 1781. In October following, there having been no election by the people of a Lieutenant-Governor, he was elected by the Assembly to that office, and was qualified, and also was chosen at the same session Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. Not long after his election New Hampshire conceived a plan to recover jurisdiction over the towns annexed to Vermont, and Gov. Chittenden, as Captain-General, called upon His Honor Lieut.-Gov. Payne, Major-General, to call out all the militia in Eastern Vermont, if needed, "to repel force by force." But in consequence of the persuasive appeal of Lieut.-Gov. Paine, setting forth the design of the Executive to the Executive of N. H., peace was preserved without resort to force. Lieut.-Gov. Payne was appointed in 1782, with Bazabel Woodward, Esq., Gen. Ethan Allen, John Fassett, Esq., and Matthew Lyons, to prepare for publication a draught of the political affairs of Vermont. After the dissolution of the union, Col. Payne retired to private life, at Lebanon, preferring, it would seem, to be a citizen of New Hampshire, and to spend his days in quietness at his home in that State. Had Col. Payne been an aspirant for further official honors, he doubtless could have attained them by a removal to Vermont. He was a very able man, and fitted for any position in public life.

Mr. Payne held important municipal offices in the towns in which he resided. He was a trustee of Dartmouth College from 1774 to 1801, and treasurer in 1779 and 1780. He received the honorary degree of A.M. in 1779.

He married for his first wife Anna Waldo, a native of Scotland, Conn., at Canterbury, April 12, 1753. She was born in 1736, and died May 15, 1759. For his second wife he married Elizabeth Spaulding, of Plainfield, Conn., in 1762. She died Aug. 29, 1809, aged 82 years, and lies buried at East Lebanon, N. H. He died July 20, 1807, aged 76 years, and lies buried at East Lebanon.

THANKFUL PAINE, daughter of Rev. Elisha and Mary Paine, of Canterbury, married Col. Aaron Cleaveland, of Canterbury, her cousin. Col. Cleaveland was a very prominent man; for a brief notice of him see page 157, Vol. II, of the Records. They had ten children, viz.:

481. I. AARON, who married Jemima Robinson, and had eight children.

Correction.—Vol. II, page 247, No. 551, should read Grace Antoinette Walker (VIII), born Nov. 14, 1870.

For the lack of more complete information of Ebenezer Paine (V), Asa (V), and their descendants, who settled in Vermont, I will return to page 89, Vol. I, Paine Family Records, and take up the line of descent from 25. NOAH (IV), the sixth child of Samuel Paine (III), who was born May 28, 1696, in Rehoboth, Mass., and married in Pomfret, or Mansfield, Conn., Jan. 13, 1732, Mehitable Storrs, daughter of Thomas Storrs, who was born March 30, 1709. Noah died April 2, 1753, aged 56, in Pomfret, Conn. His wife survived him.

The Children of Noah and Mehitable, all born in Pomfret, were, viz.:

26. THOMAS (V), born Oct. 9, 1732; mar. Nov. 13, 1755, Ann Williams, in Ashford, Conn.
27. MEHITABLE (V), born Feb. 17, 1735.
28. ZERUIAH (V), born May 17, 1737.
29. LUCY (V), born Dec. 6, 1739; mar. March, 1776, at Windsor, Vt., while on a visit to her brother, Samuel, Elihu Newell, who was born July 14, 1730, son of Thomas and Mary (Lee) Newell, in Farmington, Conn., she being his second wife. They afterwards lived at Springfield, Vt., and at Royalton, Vt., until Oct. 1780, when Royalton was destroyed by the British troops and Indians from Canada; after which Mrs. Newell, with her child, her brother's family, and a number of other women and children, were sent to Connecticut for safety, where they remained until the close of the Revolutionary war. Mr. Newell died at Windsor, Feb. 14, 1814, aged 84. His wife Lucy died March 22, 1815, at Housfield, Jefferson Co., N.Y., in her 76th year, while on a visit to her son, Seth Paine Newell (VI). See Newell Genealogy.
30. NOAH (V), born April 1, 1742, married Sarah —, and settled in Ashford, Conn., which town joins Woodstock and Pomfret on the west. March 13, 1781, Noah and his wife were admitted to the Congregational Church, and retained their membership during life. He was chosen Deacon, Jan. 1, 1790, and was generally mentioned as Deacon Noah. He was a farmer, and accounted a very worthy man. About 1820 he died in Eastford, a parish of Ashford. The date of his wife's death has not been given to me. They had eight children, all born in Eastford.

(31. (Capt.) SAMUEL (V), born May 11, 1744; mar. Sept. 6, 1773, Lucy Hall, daughter of Rev. David Hall, of Sutton, Worcester Co., Mass. Within a few years after his marriage he removed to Randolph, Vt. He served as a Captain during the Revolutionary war, was at the surrender of General Burgoyne at Saratoga, and for several years he drew a pension from the United States. After the war he was largely employed as a land surveyor, and by his good acquaintance with mathematics and excellent judgment, he won many friends. Captain Samuel died at Randolph, Dec. 13, 1834, aged 90 years, 7 months and 2 days. His wife died Dec. 2, 1817.

32. MARY (V), born Jan. 12, 1747.

26. Children of Thomas (V), and Ann Williams, all born in Pomfret, Conn.

590. JOHN (VI), born July 15, 1756; bap. Dec. 25, 1757. Bethel, Vt., was chartered to John Paine, John Howe and others, March 18, 1778. In 1779, among the first settlers in Brookfield, Vt., were Dudley Chase, Caleb Martin, Jonathan Pierce, John Lyman, John Paine and Noah Paine. John assisted in surveying and laying out the town, which was then but a wilderness, inhabited only by wild beasts, among whom the first settlers endured almost unbearable hardships. He took up about a thousand acres of land, and erected a log house where most of his children were born. As inhabitants came into the town, and were obliged to go fifteen miles to mill, he erected a gristmill and sawmill on his own land, and the people generally preferring to pay money for grinding, he accepted it, and kept it packed away in stockings in his log house, and became a very wealthy man for those days in Vermont. About 1787, John married Olive Martin, born March 28, 1771, daughter of Caleb, by whom he had seven daughters and six sons, all born in Brookfield, where John died March 26, 1838, aged 82 years. His wife Olive died Nov. 7, 1847, aged 77 years.

The inscription on his gravestone, in East Brookfield, is written thus :

JOHN PAINE died March 26, 1838. He was born in Pomfret, Conn., July 15, 1756, and was one of the first that emigrated to Brookfield, Vt. Eccentricity and frankness were his foibles ; charity, justice and integrity were his virtues ; his guide on earth and hopes of heaven were religion and Christianity.

591. NOAH (VI), born Feb. 1, 1758 ; bap. April 2, 1758, and mar. Nov. 17, 1788, in Brookfield, Vt., Polly Corley, who was born May 22, 1768, in N. Bolton, Conn., and died May 17, 1846, in East Brookfield, aged 78 years. Noah died March 2, 1825, aged 67, after suffering for many years the hardships and privations to which the early settlers were subjected. Their children were: STEPHEN, MARY, LUCY, NOAH.

The following is inscribed on his monument :

THIS MONUMENT,

Erected as a tribute of filial affection, is sacred to the memory of

who departed this life March 2, A.D. 1825, aged 67 years.

He was born in Pomfret, Conn., Feb. 1, 1758, and early in life he joined the American forces in the cause of liberty and independence ; and it was not until nearly broken down in constitution that he was prevailed upon to leave the service of his country. Soon after the Revolution he emigrated to Brookfield, then almost a trackless wilderness, and after surveying a portion of it, he located himself on a farm, encountering with frail health its hardships. By his economy and close attention to agricultural pursuits, industry and perseverance in business, he acquired a decent property, and thereby laid the foundation of the future prosperity of his family. An honest man is the noblest work of God.

As nearly all the Paynes, or Paines, of Vermont, are descendants of Samuel Paine, of Woodstock, Conn., the compiler of this branch of the family desires that all of these names, and those who have intermarried with them, will at their earliest convenience communicate to him all the information they possess, or can obtain, relating to their ancestors, themselves, and their descendants, with full Christian, middle and surnames, and full dates of year, month and day, when they can be obtained. For only the families themselves can furnish this information, and we cannot arrange and print it, without cost to them, until they furnish it to us. ## JOHN HOWARD PAYNE.

INTERESTING CEREMONIES AT HIS BURIAL.

The re-interment of the poet's remains took place, according to announcement, on the 9th of June, at Oak Hill Cemetery, near Washington. The impressive ceremonies of the occasion were carried out agreeably to the liberal ideas of Mr. W. W. Corcoran, to whose early friendship is due the conception and completion of this tribute to the poet's memory, and were attended by the President and many other high officials of the United States, foreign ministers, and representative men of all degrees. The streets through which the long procession of carriages passed were thronged with interested spectators, while other thousands were already waiting at the cemetery. A hearse built for the occasion, bearing the white satin-covered coffin, was drawn by four white horses.

The exercises at the cemetery included the burial service of the Episcopal Church, impressively read by the Bishop of Maryland, a poem written for the occasion by Robert S. Chilton, Esq., an oration by Mr. Leigh Robinson, the unveiling of the monument, and the singing of Home, Sweet Home, by a full chorus with orchestra accompaniment. At the last verse, the entire assembly arose and joined in singing it with the chorus.

The beautiful monument that now marks the place of the poet's rest consists of a white marble shaft of appropriate design, supported by a pedestal of granite, and surmounted by a colossal bust of Payne. On the front of the shaft is the inscription :

JOHN HOWARD PAYNE, AUTHOR OF HOME, SWEET HOME,
Born June 9, 1792. Died April 10, 1852.

On the opposite side is repeated the inscription that was on his tombstone at Tunis :

Sure when thy gentle spirit fled
To realms above the azure dome ;
With arms outstretched God's angels said,
Welcome to Heaven's Home, Sweet Home.

DESCENDANTS OF NOAH PAYNE.

For some time the editor has had in his possession the record of a branch of the family derived from Noah and Eunice (Hawley) Payn, who were married in 1753, compiled by Mr. Walter S. Payne, of Titusville, Pa., one of their descendants. The record is quite full as to names, but defective as to dates and places, which renders identification of individuals often difficult and uncertain. Its publication has been delayed, in the hope that by collation with other records, additional details might be obtained that would render the document more complete. Many deficiencies have been supplied from other sources, for most of which we are indebted to Mr. Royal Paine, but there is still much to be desired to make the registry genealogically satisfactory. With a view of eliciting further information it is now proposed to publish a part, at least, of the manuscript, trusting that those who are cognizant of other facts will kindly furnish them. This family has been extensively represented in Saratoga and other counties of Northern New York for nearly a hundred years.

First Generation.

NOAH PAYNE, born, according to the record above referred to, in 1730; but if, as seems probable, he was son of Stephen and Sarah (Leach), [See Vol. I, p. 90] the date should be Nov. 24, 1729, and his birthplace probably Pomfret, Conn., to which place tradition points as the origin of this family. He died Dec. 14, 1806, æ. 78. Married, 1753, Eunice Hawley, born 1733, and died Oct. 20, 1805. They settled in Fort Miller, N. Y., 1766.

Their children were:

1805, Aug. 1st. Arrived at New London, brigantine Sally, Capt. B. Paine, from Martinico. The cargo is the property of Benjamin & Paine, of Norwich. She was taken by a British sloop-of-war, and recaptured by Capt. Paine without shedding any blood.—Hartford Mercury, Sept. 19, 1805.

---

The next number will complete the second volume of the RECORDS, consisting of twelve quarterly issues, instead of eight as in Vol. I. The preparation of the Index for the volume may somewhat delay the publication, or as in the case of the previous volume, the Indexes may be published at a later date, separately.

---

It is the desire and intention of the Editor to continue the publication of this work, for which there is still abundant material available, if the family in whose interest it was begun and has been continued, are sufficiently interested to sustain it. Financially, it can hardly be considered a success, but as his expectations, founded upon some past experience, were not over sanguine, the disappointment is not great. All that is asked to ensure its continuation is a subscription list sufficient to pay the bare expenses of publication. Any excess of receipts, should there be any, will be appropriated for the prosecution of further Researches.

EASTHAM FAMILY.

By JOSIAH PAINE, OF HARWICH, MASS.

WILLIAM PAINE, or PAYNE, son of William Paine, Esq., and his wife Elizabeth, of Eastham, born in 1746, the year in which his father died in the Colonial service at Louisbourg, Cape Breton, was after the marriage of his mother with Edmund Doane, placed in the family of Rev. Joseph Crocker, pastor of the Second Congregational Church in Eastham, where he continued during his minority. Mr. Crocker was a most excellent man, and his amiable ward derived great advantages from being a member of the family. Mr. Crocker was a well educated clergyman, having been a graduate of Harvard College, and Mr. Payne found him a great helper in the matters of education. Mr. Payne always spoke of him highly. Not many years after leaving his "venerable and beloved master" at Eastham, he went to Boston, and at length, deciding to become a physician, he commenced the study of medicine under Doct. Joseph Warren, the distinguished patriot, who afterwards fell on Bunker Hill in the memorable battle, June 17, 1775. But the trouble with the mother country coming on, his resources were disturbed and studies interrupted. School teaching suggesting itself, as a means of support, he opened an "English Grammar School" in Boston, in 1774, "which had lately been kept by Mr. Ward," and assured those who should "favor him with the important task of educating their children," he would exert his "utmost endeavors by a constant and careful Attention to their interest, to merit their Approbation and deserve their Encouragement." Beside "English Grammer, Reading, Writing and Arithmetic," he promised to teach the "Rudiments of Latin." The occupation of the town by the British troops in 1775, was detrimental to his school, and it was discontinued. Accepting the position of tutor in the Perkins' family of which James and Thomas H., eminent merchants afterwards, were members, he went with the family to Barnstable, and after the evacuation of the besieged town by the English troops he returned, and again opened his school. The duties of a teacher in those days were arduous, and he seems to have found but very little spare time to devote to private affairs. He was obliged, he says in a letter to his kind uncle Thomas, at Eastham, dated at Boston, Oct. 31, 1776, to be in his school "from the first entrance of light till nine in the evening," and the "leisure half days"—Thursday and Saturday—of each week "to wait on such as do not attend the school," meaning undoubtedly those he was privately instructing. For awhile after this date but a little is known of him. For a short period, it is understood he was in some business of a mercantile character in New London, Conn., and that while there he became acquainted with Miss Isaacs who soon became his wife. In 1783 he became a resident of Easthampton on Long Island and engaged in his vocation as teacher. In 1784, he took charge of the Clinton Academy just erected mainly through his and Doct. Buells' efforts. His connection with this academical institution was not severed until after 1790. In 1791, the year his son, John Howard was born, he was teacher of French, English grammar, writing, arithmetic, &c., No. 4, Great Dock Street, New York City. In 1793, he was residing at No. 5, Dye Street, and teaching on Little Queen Street. His school in 1794 and 1795 was at 23 Cedar St., and in 1796 at 29 Ann St. In 1797 and 1798 his school was on Ferry Street. In 1799 he was invited by some leading and influential men in Boston to open a school in that place, and he removed thither that year, and opened the Academy on Berry, afterwards Channing, Street. It soon became a noted school and well attended. Among the scholars who became prominent in after life was the late John Gorham Palfrey. John Howard Payne, the teacher's son, was a scholar at this school, giving attention to elocution, a branch of education his father was very successful in teaching. Mr. Payne closed his school on Berry Street about 1809, and returned to New York City where he again engaged in teaching. In 1811, he was teaching on Common Street near Grand Street in that city. On the afternoon of Monday, March 3, 1812, while engaged in his school room, he fell to the floor, from a paralytic shock, in a senseless condition, was carried to his home, where he remained unconscious until Friday, March 7, when he passed away in the 67th year of his age. He was interred in the city, but now all traces of the precise spot are lost.

In person, Mr. Payne was of medium height. He never was a strong man. Early in life his health was impaired, and for beneficial results he made a voyage to the West Indies. Later in life his health was quite delicate, and at one period he thought he was consumptively inclined, but by seven years abstinence from all animal food, and living upon milk and vegetable food, he recovered, and was able to give his last years of his life to teaching, though not in the best of health. His son, Thatcher Taylor, assisted him in teaching, and was present, it is understood, when he fell in the school room. Mr. Payne was a Congregationalist, and was a member of the South Church in Eastham, of which Mr. Crocker was pastor. The year in which he changed the spelling of the name to Payne is not known. In a letter to his uncle in 1776, which is yet extant, it is written Paine.

For his first wife, he married Miss Lucy Taylor of Barnstable, Mass., by Rev. Timothy Hilliard, Nov. 14, 1775. Her death occurred not long after marriage. For second wife, he married Miss Sarah Isaacs in 1780. She was a daughter of Mr. Aaron Isaacs, a respected citizen of Easthampton, L. I., and a woman remarkable for beauty and many excellent traits of character. She died at Boston, Thursday, June 18, 1807, of consumption, after a long and distressing illness, aged 49 years. Her remains were deposited in the Sturgis Tomb in that City. She appears to have assisted her husband in teaching. One of her scholars, a lady over ninety years of age yet alive, has "pleasant remembrance of her as a very pretty old lady, very neat and dainty about her dress," teaching her reading, spelling, and sewing. She also remembers "Master Paine, to whose school she went after leaving Mrs. Paine's school."

He was a man of great energy and perseverance. Their children were :

241.

ENOCH PAINE, son of Thomas, Esq., and Phebe Paine, of Eastham, Mass., was never married. He early went to sea. Was on board a privateer near the close of the Revolutionary war, and was twice taken prisoner. He left sea-faring life, and for awhile resided at Charleston, S. C., and Baltimore, Md. He went to Athens, Pa., where brothers Clement and David resided in 1803, and for awhile engaged in trade. Here he died April 19, 1829. He was buried at Athens, Penn.

242.

SETH PAINE, son of Thomas, Esq., and Phebe Paine, his wife, was born in Eastham, Mass. He learned the printer's trade, and was engaged in the business in Boston as early as 1783. In 1788, he was in Philadelphia in the employ of Andrew Brown, publisher of the Federal Gazette. The latter part of the year 1789, he went to New York and was engaged with O. McLean in the printing business, his brother Clement arriving the same year in the city to engage in the same business. While here they formed an acquaintance with their cousin, William Payne, the teacher, who in a letter to Thomas Paine, Esq., Oct. 5, 1789, speaks of them as "the very welcome representatives of your well remembered and most endeared family." In 1791, with brother Clement he projected the establishment of a press at Catskill on the Hudson. The material for the office was ordered, but the loss of the vessel on the passage from London put an end to the enterprise. He subsequently went to Charleston, S. C., where he, in 1795, with Peter Freneau, commenced the publication of the CITY GAZETTE, the first daily paper printed in South Carolina. The paper was neutral in politics. Mr. Paine in a letter to his brother Clement, in 1799, says: "We have had the remarkable good fortune to succeed in keeping up the character of our paper without prostituting it, or our own principles, to either of the two great prevailing parties, which is quite a singular instance in the United States, at least in the great towns."

He belonged to the Masonic fraternity, and but a short time before his death was Junior Warden of the Grand Lodge of South Carolina. He delivered before that Lodge on the first anniversary of the death of Washington an eulogy, which was printed. He died at Charleston, in October, 1801, of the Yellow fever, in the 46th year of his age. "He was a man of close application and industry, of benevolent disposition, and of a sound discriminating judgment." His death was deeply lamented by all who knew him. He was never married.

243.

DAVID PAINE, son of Thomas, Esq., and Phebe Paine, born in Eastham, Mass.; very early in life went to Maine. In 1787 he went to Bennington and was in a land office there with Capt. Blotgett several years. About 1791 he went to Canaan, Conn., and with a Mr. Goldsmith, engaged in trade; but at this place his stay was short, as in 1792, with his brother Clement, he engaged in trade at Rensselaerville, N. Y. He soon left the business here, it proving unprofitable, and in 1794 settled at Athens, where he opened a land office. He was soon joined by his brother Clement, and a copartnership was formed for trade. He was a Justice of the Peace; the first Burgess for the Borough, and for a period a Postmaster at Athens. Mr. Paine was twice married. First to Phebe Lindley, of Lindleytown, Tioga Co., Penn., Jan. 30, 1803, to which place he removed and resided for some time. She dying, for second wife, he married Anne W. Harding of Portland, Me., about 1823. "She was an amiable and highly accomplished lady." Some time after this marriage, he resided in Portland, and was engaged with his nephew, Seth Paine, in the publication of the "Gazette of Maine." He returned to Athens and died Sept 7, 1851. His widow, married, and died at Waverly, N. Y., in 1879. He was a man rather short in stature and of a robust constitution. "His manner and appearance were eminently dignified." He commanded "alike the respect and esteem of those of mature years, and the love of the younger class which he so much prized." The following notice of him appeared in the "Paine Family Register" of Jan. 1, 1858. "Died on the 7th Sept., 1851, at his residence in Athens, Penn., David Paine, Esq., aged 83. He was a native of Eastham, Cape Cod, Mass., and settled at Athens early in the year 1794. Few indeed of his old associates in the settlement of the country now remain, yet in the early annals of the beautiful Susquehanna valley, which for more than a half a century he made his home, his name will be remembered as one of those identified with its history and improvement. His warm heart and social disposition ever won the esteem and love of those who knew him, and although traits like these naturally strengthen man's attachment to life, yet as the increasing infirmities of age warned him of approaching dissolution, he was accustomed to look forward to it as a happy release, evincing at the same time a spirit of meek resignation to the will of his Heavenly Father."

Mr. Paine left no children. He was interested in the genealogy of the family, and left in manuscript some notice of his ancestry.

CLEMENT PAINE, son of Thomas, Esq., and Phebe Paine his wife, born in Eastham; at the age of fourteen entered the printing office of Mr. Draper at Portland, Me., to learn the printing business. For some reason not made plain, he left in a short time and engaged with Mr. Waites in the same town. In 1789 he went to New York, his brother Seth being there in business, and worked at his trade. In 1791, with Seth, his brother, he concluded to open a printing office at Catskill, on the Hudson, but, as before stated, the material for the office was lost on its passage from London, in the brig Betsey, the project was given up. He subsequently went to Philadelphia and found employment in the printing office of Claypole's Philadelphia Advertiser. After nearly two years' connection with this office, he with his brother David went into mercantile business at Rensselaerville, N. Y. He left the place in 1794, and went to Athens, on Tioga Point, a new settlement, and associated with his brother David in trade. Here he continued in business many years. Mr. Paine in stature was rather short, and of slender constitution. In politics was a decided Jeffersonian. He was a Presidential-elect in 1812, and cast the vote of his district for James Madison. He was an active supporter of Andrew Jackson. He was a man of considerable literary taste. He delivered an oration on Masonry before the St. John's Lodge of Rural Amity, at Athens, of which he was many years Secretary, and which was published. He was considerably interested in pomology. He early introduced a variety of choice fruit trees.

Mr. Paine married at Salem, Wayne Co., Penn., Anne Woodbridge, July 20, 1806. She was the daughter of Maj. Theodore Woodbridge, a Revolutionary officer, and was born in Glastonbury, Conn., Sept. 13, 1784, and died of apoplexy Oct. 25, 1834, at Athens, greatly lamented. In 1844, just a half a century after his first coming to Athens, he removed to Troy, Pa., in consequence of the infirmities of age, and resided with his son until his death, in his 81st year, March 1, 1849. His remains were interred in Athens.

The whole of his business career was characterized by a habit of order and exact punctuality quite remarkable. He was not without his peculiarities, but in all his conduct he ever displayed a feeling heart and a spirit resigned to the dispensations of Providence. His name was widely known, and his memory is still reverently cherished in the district in which he was so long an honored and exemplary citizen.

Mr. Paine never forgot his native place. In 1804 he visited the grave of his mother in the old church-yard at Orleans, Mass., (formerly a part of Eastham, in which section he was born,) and caused a wall built around it and a white marble slab with inscription to rest upon it. He was also interested in the lineage of the family, and left some account of his ancestry.

287. HENRY MORTON PAYNE (VIII), son of Joel and Eunice, born Apr. 30, 1823, in Mansfield, Mass. About 1840, he removed to Lowell, where he followed his trade, which was that of a machinist. He was married Nov. 28, 1845, at Salmon Falls, N. H., to Emma Morrill Tilton, of Sanbornton, now Tilton, N. H. They lived at Salmon Falls a short time, and then removed to Newburyport, Mass., where he was overseer of the Glove Cotton Mills. His mechanical training turned his attention to the manufacture of machinery, and he built a large machine shop and iron foundry, from which he turned out large quantities of the machinery used in cotton mills. He was a prominent citizen of the place, when, in 1868, business reverses decided him to move to Chicago, where he now resides. His principal occupation has been that of a real estate dealer, but in the dull years following the great fire he turned his attention elsewhere. Among other things he was largely influential in placing the bonds of the Northern Pacific R.R. in the South. He was also actively connected, for a considerable time, with the Chicago Journal of Commerce. He was one of the chief promoters of the new town of Garfield, recently established near Chicago, and destined to become an important manufacturing center. His whole life has been an example of indomitable energy rarely met with, and which is still unabated. He changed the spelling of his name when young. He has had three children, all born in Newburyport :

HENRY CHARLES (IX), }
CHARLES HENRY (IX), } Twins, were born Nov. 28, 1850.
WILLIAM MORTON (IX), b. Feb. 14, 1858.

HENRY CHARLES PAYNE resides in Chicago, and is an artist by profession. He has turned his attention largely to portrait painting, in which field he has met with marked success. He is as yet unmarried.

CHARLES HENRY PAYNE was a youth of great promise. He entered Bowdoin College at sixteen, but from ill health was unable to complete the course. He went to Chicago with the family, but fell a victim to quick consumption, and died Mar. 17, 1871. He is interred at Oakwoods Cemetery, near Chicago.

WILLIAM MORTON PAYNE attended the High School of Chicago, from which he graduated in 1874. He then took a position as assistant in the Free Library, then just opened to the public. His tastes while at school had been chiefly scientific, but they now took a literary turn, and led him, among other things, to master the principal languages of modern Europe. In 1876, he was called to the chair of Physical Science in the South Division High School, which position he still occupies. He is an enthusiastic botanist, and is thoroughly familiar with the local flora. He is unmarried.

288. THEODORE PAINE (VIII), b.—; mar. in Pawtucket, R. I., and went to California when quite young. He died there a few years ago, leaving a son:

HENRY THEODORE (IX), who is married, has children, and lives with his family in Pawtucket.

DIED—At Warwick, R. I., Sept. 17, 1883, after a short and painful sickness, MRS. LOUISE (ACKERMAN) PAINE, wife of George Taylor Paine, of Providence. [No. 248, p. 67, Vol. 2, P. F. R.] She was the daughter of Charles and Lucy E. Ackerman, of the same city, and was universally admired and beloved for her many graces and virtues. The Providence Journal of the following day, in reference to the sad event, said, "The sudden death of this lady was a painful surprise and affliction to a wide circle of friends, to whom she appeared, as it were but yesterday, as the picture of health and the ideal of perfect womanhood."

This issue completes the second volume of the "Paine Family Records," embracing the last twelve quarterly numbers. Its appearance has been greatly, but unavoidably, delayed by a prolonged absence and various pressing private affairs of the editor, for which he begs the indulgence of subscribers and readers. The accompanying Indexes to the volume will sufficiently testify to the extent and variety of its contents.

There is still a large amount of miscellaneous and fragmentary records relating to individuals or families of our race in the possession of the editor, that are of little present value as material for publication for the want of connecting and related facts, many of which could, no doubt, be brought to light by proper effort. For this reason, further researches are to be encouraged, and facts of all kinds pertinent to the object of this work, will be thankfully accepted from any source.

---

From a valued correspondent in England, Miss Minima Amwyl, of Blackheath, there has been received a considerable number of abstracts of early wills left by decedents of our name, and found by her in Somerset House and other official depositories of such documents. She has with good judgment selected those of dates previous to the emigration period of our New England founders, and has transcribed them with much care and skill. It is probable that some of them may prove useful aids in tracing the pre-emigration pedigrees of our colonial ancestors—a department of our work in which but little has as yet been attempted. A further account of these testaments will be given after they have been examined.

Parties having occasion to require similar services in England will find Miss Amwyl entirely competent and trustworthy, and very reasonable in her charges.
